Quick Creation Of U. N. Police Asked by U. S.

Assembly Urged to Air 'Misuse' Of Veto by Soviet; Aranha President

New York, N. Y., Sept. 16 (U.P.).—The United Nations General Assembly, beginning a momentous session, was asked by the United States tonight to speed creation of an international police force, and to give a thorough airing to Soviet "misuse" of the veto.

Warren Austin, permanent American delegate to U. N., challenged the Assembly to tackle world problems boldly, lest they be "bottled up to ferment and explode."

Austin delivered a Nation-wide broadcast (CBS) after the United States lost its first Assembly tussle—and attempt to elect Herbert V. Evatt of Australia as Assembly president.

Latin American countries led a bloc that elected Brazil's Oswaldo Aranha.

Major addresses will be delivered to morrow by United States Secretary of State George C. Marshall and Vice Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky of Russia, but Austin attempted to establish American initiative even before the formal battle was joined.

"We intend to try in this Assembly to gain agreement on specific steps toward creation of the peace forces," Austin said.

"We are determined to make vigorous efforts toward agreement on practical ways of interpreting the voting principles of the U. N. charter to avoid misuse of the veto. The charter . . . can and will grow and change to meet the changing needs of humanity."

Austin also said that "We must ascertain whether there is possible in the near future agreement with the Soviet Union on effective enforceable safeguards against the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes."

Austin referred repeatedly to international tensions that exist and warned that history no longer plods, but races with the speed of runners in a 100-yard dash.

"Do not be disheartened if you read of controversies," Austin said. "When they exist, it is both good and right that they should be placed before the public. No one is served when they are bottled up to ferment and explode."

Ultimatum Defied

Trieste, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Seven game American GIs, including a Silver Spring, Md., soldier, held off at gun point today the vanguard of a force of 2000 Yugoslav troops who tried to enter Trieste on the day of its birth as a free state.

The incident was one of nearly 20, caused by attempts of Yugoslavs to encroach on Italian territory, which were so serious in their entirety that an Allied general said:

"We could have had war."

Officers in charge of the Yugoslav troops, approaching the United States lines on the new Italian-Yugoslav frontier about 3 a. m., said:

"We have 2000 troops behind us and we are coming through. We will give you five minutes."

The two young lieutenants in charge stalled off the Yugoslavs until reinforcements arrived.

The Americans, by that time in batalion strength, and the Yugoslavs deployed in battle formation

Commissioners Ask Citizens to Help Send More Food to Europe

Special Session Favored

Housewives Willing

The District Commissioners yesterday asked all residents of Washington to "refrain from eating meat" two days a week as a means of providing hungry Europe with food.

Following a board meeting yesterday, the Commissioners issued a proclamation urging people of the District to observe two meatless days of their own choosing every week in order to increase the supply of wheat sent overseas.

Their move came after study of a plan suggested by New York's Mayor William O'Dwyer, which calls for a return to wartime meatless days and specifies two meatless days a week in that city. The New York City Hotel Association has indorsed the plan.

Plan Entirely Voluntary

The Commissioners emphasized that the meatless day program is entirely voluntary. No restaurant, hotel or individual is under any compulsion to follow their recommendation.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, declined to discuss the possible effect of the program on curreent high prices. He said the move was made "because of the situation in Europe."

It was indicated, however, that the Commisisoners feel observance of two meatless days a week would help to increase buyer resistance to high prices.

Many Already Conform

Meanwhile, a survey of residents throughout the city and Greater Washington showed that, in general, citizens will go along with the program. In fact, the survey found that many are already doing without meat at least two days a week.

Mrs. Diana Weiner, 20, of 5804 Georgia ave. nw., for instance, said she "didn't buy much meat during the summer anyway."

"It's too darn high," she said. And if the Commissioners' meatless day plan will feed Europe, she's "all for it."

Also, "willing to do without" is Homer W. White, 26, of 1004 K st. nw. An Army veteran and father of two young children, White recalled days during the war when he went without meat, and said he "couldn't see why it should be difficult for anyone "to observe the plan.

White, who said he does most of the shopping for his family, thinks it a "pretty good idea." "People over there," he observed, "have to eat just as much as we do." He said he would give up

Aged Spinsters, Famed Belles, Found Starving

Pittsburgh, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Two aged spinster sisters, once the belles of Pittsburgh's southside, were in Presbyterian Hospital today suffering from starvation because they were too proud to accept food from neighbors.

Frances, 89, and Molly Bittner, 91, both of whom weigh no more than 65 pounds, were removed by police last night from the rubbish-littered apartment where they lived like hermits.

The emaciated sisters were too weak to move. They ordered police, "Go away. We don't want help."

A niece, Clementine Bittner, 73, said she had not spoken to her aunts for 48 years as the result of a fight over the division of their parents' estate. She said they had turned down her offer, made through a neighbor, to buy them food.

...Police Report Plan Is Ordered

Agnew Is Given Command Over Bureau to Handle Crime Complaints

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The District Commissioners yesterday authorized the police department to set up the streamlined system of crime reporting recommended by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

In taking this action, the Commissioners promoted six policemen including Lieut. John J. Agnew. He was given the rank of captain and placed in charge of the new central complaint bureau.

Agnew was given a clerical force of 25 persons at a cost of $18,000. They are to revamp the prevailing obsolete methods of handling complaints, records and communications.

The Commissioners commended Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendant, for the plans he drew up for the new system.

Said Commissioner Guy Mason of the major:

"I think it is very courageous of Bob to admit his frailties in office and do something about them."

Major Barrett took action after an expose in The Washington Post demonstrated that over a period of 11 months, 600 robbery complaints were hidden from the public.

Retraction on "Pocketing"

At first, Major Barrett denied that the pocketing of complaints was so extensive. Later, however, his own investigators and those called in by the FBI proved that during the first six months of this year 6162 out of the total of 10,592 complaints including petty larcenies and aggravated assault were "pocketed" by police.

The commissioners acted at their first meeting after Major Barrett's report was delivered.

At present, Inspector Floyd Truscott is in charge of arranging an operative procedure for the Central Complaint Bureau. Sometime after Thursday, Major Barrett indicated, Captain Agnew will devote his full time to getting the details of operation in order.

Late yesterday, Major Barrett met with Agnew and Truscott to determine what forms would be used to record complaints. Sample forms from "eight or 10" cities were to be used as a base for those that Washington will adopt.

For the present, Major Barrett said, the police will continue to withhold for a period of not more than 30 days crime reports of a "confidential" nature where authorized.

"Code System" Awaited

But, he said, as soon as a "code" system for confidential matters can be worked out, there will be no more "pocketed" reports. He said that code will only be used where divulgence of complaints will harm citizens or prevent apprehension of criminals.

But all complaints will be recorded statistically.

The new bureau should be in effect within 60 or 90 days, according to Barrett.

When completed, here is how the system will work:

A citizen who dials a special emergency number will be connected with the central complaint bureau. There, the complaint will be typed and the radio dispatcher who will be stationed in the same

160-Mile Hurricane Roaring Towards Palm Beach Area; Warnings Extended to Miami

First Storm Waves Lash Florida . . .

AS THE BAROMETER FELL—Salt water from the restless Atlantic—stirred by winds from the hurricane still miles off-shore—sprays over a highway north of Miami late yesterday. Storm warnings were up from South Florida to Cape Hatteras

Floridans Batten Down Cities as Mighty Storm Approaches Coast

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Hurricane warnings were extended south to the greater Miami area tonight as 40 to 50-mile gales lashed this city where the brunt of the mighty blow moving in from the Atlantic was expected to strike tomorrow.

Giant waves slapped the seawall as the city battened down.

The 160-mile-an-hour hurricane, now extending 500 miles across any carrying winds of 75 miles an hour or more for a 150-mile diameter, was centered near Great Abaco Island in the British Bahamas, the Weather Bureau said and moving slowly teward Florida, 175 miles west.

"Tides will be very high on the East Coast from Palm Beach northward," a Weather Bureau bulletin said.

Hurricane Flags Flying

Black and red hurricane flags already were fluttering along 175 miles of Florida East Coast and the Red Cross warned its disaster workers they might have to undertake "mass care" of storm victims.

At Moore Haven, on the far side of Lake Okeechobee west of here, farmers began evacuating low sections of the fertile mucklands. They feared their smaller dikes might collapse if the hurricane displaces the lake's shallow waters.

The Red Cross announced it had commandeered trains to evacuate residents in the Lake Okeechobee region around Belle Glade. Just 19 years ago today, heavy lake tides backed up by a similiar hurricane, killed 1836 persons in that section.

At Vero Beach, hub of the Indian River fruit section 75 miles to the north, millions of dollars of citrus crops just reaching maturity were in peril.

The skies turned laden in the early afternoon and great black clouds brought on a premature dusk. Between gusts of the gales the air hd an eerie tenseness and almost "smelled" of hurricane.

Waves Pound Seawall

Strong waves pounded the 18-foot seawall at Palm Beach on the "front" side of the city and the 6-foot wall protecting West Palm Beach's Lake Worth Harbor.

A steady stream of traffic moved south to Miami from the hurricane-altered area until the late weather report extended the hurricane warning to include the Miami area.

At Miami's big international airport, all commercial lines began cancelling schedules, lashing down planes and hangars and making plans to evacuate some large passenger craft to Cuba, out of the storm's path. Pan-American Airways announced all flights would be cancelled after midnight and that no inbound planes would arrive after 10 p. m. EDT.

The Red Cross in Washington ordered 76 national disaster representatives in the area from Florida to Maine to prepare for "any eventuality" if the storm struck the mainland.

Jury Declines To Indict on Clegg Charges

Criminal Action Seen At End in Alleged Police Brutality Case

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A Federal grand jury yesterday declined to return any indictments on charges of police brutality filed by Julius Willie Clegg, 26-year-old Negro war veteran.

The jury decision ended all possibility of criminal action on the complaint, said United States Attorney George Morris Fay, who sat in as an observer during the jury sessions.

Still pending last night was the question of Police Trial Board action on companion charges made by Clegg. The District's corporation counsel has been asked to study Clegg's complaints he was illegally arrested and illegally held without charge, to determine whether they warrant police trial board action.

Report Not Received

Acting Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray said last night his office had not yet received for its study a report of the Police Department investigation of Clegg's complaints. He said he assumed the report had been withheld pending yesterday's action of the grand jury.

The nature of Clegg's complaints to be considered by us is separate and different from that

2280 Missing Or Killed in Jap Typhoon

2 Towns Wiped Out On Honshu; No U. S. Lives Reported Lost

Tokyo, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—A lyrically named typhoon, Kathleen, spread death and destruction over two thirds of Honshu Island, and casualty figures tonight still were mounting.

Kyodo News Agency, U. S. Army and unofficial estimates rolled up these accounts:

2280 dead or missing, including 100 dead in Tokyo.

Two medium-sized towns wiped out and numerous villages flooded.

Fifteen prefectures extensively damaged.

Hundreds of millions of yen damage (millions of United States dollars.)

General MacArthur's headquarters had no reports of American or Allied casualties. However, some families were moved to safer locations and several hundred U. S. Cavalrymen at Camp McNair, near Fujiyama, were supplied by air.

The typhoon, named Kathleen by the U. S. Army Weather Bureau, passed 30 miles south of Tokyo Monday night.

It destroyed homes, crops, bridges, railroads, highways, communications, and many dikes, releasing river waters to flood a large area north of Tokyo and to threaten this capital city.

Nine inches of rain was reported at the Tone River's headwaters and more than four inches through much of Honshu.

Thousands of Japanese took refuge on hills, housetops, levees—any high point. One prefecture reported 160,000 already on relief.

Diver Finds Body In B-17 Wreckage In Bush River Mud

Aberdeen, Md., Sept. 16 (A.P.).—A diver today located fragments of the wreckage and the body of one of the nine men killed yesterday when a B-17 bomber exploded and crashed in Chesapeake Bay in a flight from the Army's Aberdeen Proving Ground.

A board of inquiry watched operations as the diver dredged through mud 18 feet below the surface of Bush River for the main wreckage and additional bodies.

The proving ground's public relations officer quoted the only survivor as saying First Leiut. John Whitney or South Arlington, Va., pilot of the plane, rang the alarm bell for all aboard to bail out just before the crash.

Capt. Charles W. Warmack of Paris, Tenn., copilot who parachuted to safety, said when he jumped he thought the others were leaving through the B-17's three escape hatches.

The body located was that of M/Sgt. Julian J. Skalski of Philadelphia.

Greenbelt Council Election Brings Record Total of Votes

Greenbelt, Md., cast an all-time record vote yesterday in its semi-annual election in which 19 candidates sought election to the five-man town council.

Ballots were still being counted late last night.

Although polls officially closed at 7 p. m., an estimated 200 persons at that time were inside the town firehouse where the ballots were cast. Those inside were permitted to cast their ballots. It was nearly 8 before the final ballots were deposited and nearly 10 when all ballots were separated and tabulation began.

Unofficially it was estimated 1536 ballots were cast, 561 more than in the previous all-time record vote in 1945 of 975.

The 19 candidates were divided into three groups, including two slates of five candidates each indorsed by local organizations and a group of nine independents.

Mayor George F. Bauer, one of four incumbents, headed a slate indorsed by the Greenbelt Improvement Association. Others on this slate were George M. Eshbaugh, Benjamin P. Goldfadden, Frank J. McConnell and Albert J. Schaffer.

On a slate indorsed by the Committee for Better Government were Thomas J. Canning, David M. Granahan, Frank J. Lastner, Allen D. Morrison and Mrs. Elizabeth Smith Harrington. Mrs. Harrington was the only woman in the race.

Independents running were Abraham Chasanow, Sherrod East, Vernon T. Fox, Herbert Hertz, Allan M. Lawrence, A. C. Long and James C. Smith.

Britain Takes Surprise Step Ending Austrian War Status

London, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—Britain ended today a formal state of war with Austria, to permit "commercial and financial dealings," and cited Four-Power failure to agree on an Austrian peace treaty as one reason for the action.

A three-line statement appeared in today's issue of the London Gazette announcing the surprise move, together with the text of a note handed to the Austrian government in Vienna.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the act was not to be regarded as a "separate peace" because Britain still hoped the Big Four would agree on a peace treaty.

The note said that one reason for ending the state of war was that "through circumstances beyond Austrian control it has as yet proved impossible to concluded a treaty which would dispose of questions relating to Austria arising out of the state of war with the German Reich."

The note emphasized that normal British-Austrian relations were being restored without prejudice to these three previous commitments: Terms of the German unconditional surrender; the June, 1946, agreement on Allied control machinery for Austria which provided Four-Fower occupation; resolution of issues awaiting settlement

Million Cross Punjab Border In Eight Days of Migrations

New Delhi, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—Two of the greatest migrations in modern times, led by marching columns of 800,000, are in progress both ways across the riot-torn border area in Junjab between Moslem Pakistan and Hindu India.

Officials said today that more than one million refugees had crossed the border in the last eight days. The exchange is expected to total four million persons.

The migration of Hindus and Sikhs from West Punjab and of Moslems from East Junjab is proceeding by plane, train, automobile and marching column, all under military protection.

The biggest mass movement from Pakistan's West Punjab to India's East Punjab began September 11 when 400,000 Sikhs and Hindus under military escort began moving toward Ferozepore.

Hoping to prevent attacks on the enormous marching bodies, India and Pakistan, have declined to disclose their exact locations.

Russians Suspend Talks on Paying Lend-Lease Bills

By The Associated Press

Officials disclosed yesterday that Russo-American discussions looking toward a settlement of Russia's $11,298,000,000 Lend-Lease account have been suspended for the past eight weeks because of Soviet failure to reply to American proposals.

But the United States officials expressed hope that the Soviets will before long resume the talks which began April 30. The State Department assumes the Russian negotiators are awaiting instructions from Moscow.

At the last meeting, the American conferees indicated to the Russians what this Nation expected before closing the wartime account. For one thing, the United States is understood to want payment of a portion of the cost of goods which still have peacetime value. Government officials said a fairly large percentage of our Lend-Lease to Russia falls into this category.

Congress May Hold Session on Prices

Call Almost Certain if Investigators Recommend Curbs to Runaway Trend

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

If the touring investigators of Congress can come up with concrete proposals for legislation to smash the runaway food price spiral, Congress will rush back into special session.

Both parties appear to be agreed on that. They seem equally agreed that failing hope of congressional action on prices, it will be strictly up to President Truman as to whether or not Congress is called back to work before January.

Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), Senate Democratic whip, told reporters yesterday he would favor a special session only if the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, which has three subcommittees holding hearings throughout the Nation, had some specific legislation to recommend.

Otherwise, Lucas pointed out, all that Congress could do if it called a special session, would be to appoint more investigating committees to suggest legislation.

Tied Closely To Foreign Aid

It is obvious that there is no serious consideration among leaders of either party to reimposition of price control and rationing.

Lucas said the entire foreign aid program, the Marshall Plan, and any other suggestions are closely tied in with the domestic price situation.

Obviously, Congressional authorities agreed, the value of any aid given Europe will depend upon the stability of domestic prices.

President Truman will return from his South American trip late this week to find that the skyrocketing price inflation here has enormously complicated and to a serious degree menaced Administration plans to aid Europe.

Export Curb Demanded

There is a growing demand among members of Congress that food exports to Europe be curbed in view of the demand and supply situation here.

A cabinet committee report on exports and their relation to prices will be submitted to the President Monday. Its contents have not yet been made public but presumably it wil lin general follow public pronouncements of Cabinet members.

For example, Anderson pointed out yesterday that the United States is committed to export only 17 million pounds of meat in the current quarter, whereas its total production last week alone was 268 million pounds.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), who recently returned from a six weeks' inspection of the European situation at first-hand, declared that if a special session is called on European aid domestic prices must be considered at the same time.

"Halves of Same Apple"

"They are two halves of the same apple," he told reporters.

Lodge said a committee report on commodity speculation, profits of middlemen, and effects of subsidies before is necessary before Congress can act.

Most commodity markets marked time yesterday awaiting the results of several actions recently taken to lower prices, or at least halt the wild upspiraling of the last few weeks.

Only one record was set yesterday. At Chicago two loads of Illinois-fed steers sold for $35.75—a new high for this year. It was still well below the all-time record of $39 set last November 29.

Grains Drop, Go Back Up

On the Chicago Board of Trade grains showed their nervousness by first plunging downward and then regaining about half their loss. The early drop was caused, brokers asserted, by the Government's action to more than double margin requirements of grain speculators.

The rebound was caused by announcement by the governors of the Board of Trade and of the exchanges at Kansas City and Minneapolis that no action on the Government's request will be taken until late this week. Too many directors of all three exchanges are attending the Grain and Feed Dealers National convention at St. Louis, to permit a quorum, Joseph M. Mehl, administrator of the Commodity Exchange Authority, was told by exchange officials.

At the close wheat was off up to 3½ cents; corn was down as much as 2¾ cents, and oats as much as 2⅜ cents.

Anderson "Relieves" Taft

At Albuquerque, N. Mex., Secretary of Agriculture Anderson joined other national figures in urging the public to "eat less extravagantly."

Anderson's admonition took a lot of the heat off Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who said a few days ago on the West Coast that people should "eat less and less extravagantly."

Taft was assailed for that very statement only yesterday by Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.), who challenged him to a Nation-wide radio debate on the subject.

Actually economists and scores of members of Congress of both parties agree that the principal cause of high prices is the fact that the vastly increased national income means that more people demand better food than they ever had before, so that the demand has outrun the supply. Solution is greater production, but when it comes to food it will take two years before increased production will be reflected in supply.

Report Prepared

Anderson said he would return to Washington this week, to sign with Secretary of Commerce Harriman and Secretary of State Marshall a report for President Truman on prices and exports.

The three constitute the Cabinet food committee. The report, which already has been prepared by Agriculture officials, may recommend an early session of Congress to deal with the rampaging food markets.

Throughout the Nation plans for "meatless days" were started in a score of cities. New York, Chicago and many other cities appealed to hotel, restaurants, and housewives to bar meats from their tables at least one day a week.

At the same time the Department of Agriculture was announcing that cattle slaughter last week under Federal inspection was nearly five times the corresponding week a year ago.

Senate Group to Meet

Last week 349,000 head were slaughtered. That was 20 per cent above the 291,000 head of the week previous, and 277,000 head more than in the same week last year, just prior to the removal of Government controls.

In Washington a subcommittee of the Senate Agriculture Committee will meet today for a general discussion of farm problems. Main objective is to examine the operation of present laws affecting farm production and prices, such as the parity price system.

The committe plans to recommend a long-range agricultural program for the country. Considerable sentiment was reported by Lucas, for coupling some sort of a ceiling for farm prices with the continuation of price supports.

Mrs. Oreida Jones, 30, of 122 R st. ne., runs a boarding house. But she's in favor of the idea herself, and if, she said, she can "talk my roomers into it," she'll observe the two meatless days a week.

"They're all hearty eaters, though," she added. "If it would bring prices down," said Mrs. Jones, "there would be no question about it."

Blonde, 23-year-old Mrs. Jack Fulerton of 4694 S. 36th st., Arlington, termed the present prices of meat "ridiculous" and said she and her family were going without it "at least two days a week."

"It won't be any effort at all for us, and it shouldn't be to anyone else to do without it," Mrs. Fulerton said.

"Even if we could afford all we wanted," she continued, "we'd still go without it for two days a week—people in Europe need food so badly."

But Nelson Fuller takes a different view. A mechanic at the Navy Yard here, he commutes daily from Clarksburg, Md., where he has a small farm. Fuller said he raises a few hogs and chickens, and the price of feed is already "sky high."

Fears Price Rise Here

He said he "was afraid heavier wheat shipments overseas would raise prices higher here." Fuller, 29, is married and the father of three children.

"I'd just as soon they didn't ship wheat overseas," the Navy mechanic added. "We don't have enough meat here."

Mrs. Warren Sands, 24, of 1121 D st. se., mother of two children said the Commissioners' plan has her approval, and she intends to "get other things—chicken, vegetables—to take the place of meat."

In Takoma Park, Mrs. O. W. McBride, 5 Elm ave., wife of a contractor, said, "No one can deny food to people if they're starving." Mrs. McBride, however, wants shipments to Europe to be done "in the proper way." Mrs. McBride said she is already doing without meat two days "or more" a week.

Charity Begins at Home

Mrs. Lawrence Capone, 32, of 813 K st. ne., feels "people here should be looked after first—lots of them can't afford food." She intends to "continue as she is," adding that "we practically do without meat two days a week anyway." Her husband is a post-office clerk, and they have three children.

It's fish one day and chicken another for Mrs. Rosie Eure, 1230 Half st. sw., who envisions no difficulty in observing two meatless days a week. She praised the idea and deplored current high prices, which are denying her meat "most of the time anyway."

"The United States can easily deprive itself a little to help others," said Mrs. John T. Lannin, 28, of 4202 34th st., S. Fairlington. "I think everyone should cooperate to get Europe on its feet, and since we can help, I think we certainly should."

Even Albert Clemmer, 23, a butcher at the Acme Market, 5722 Georgia ave. nw., favors the grain-conserving plan urged by the city heads. "It's OK with me," Clemmer said, "just as long as it doesn't affect my job." He is married and lives at 5400 7th st. nw.

Turtle Meat Popular As Beef Price Rises

Tampa, Fla., Sept. 16 (AP).—Barton H. Smith, an importer, said today the sale of turtle steaks is booming as more and more housewives buy them as a substitute for higher priced beef.

He estimated that 5 tons of fresh turtle meat is now being shipped from Tampa daily.

Most housewives beat the steak, roll in in batter and fry it in deep fat, Smith said, but the meat also is used in stews and baked dishes.

160-Mile Hurricane Roaring Toward Palm Beach Area

slowly toward the Palm Beach area," the Weather Bureau said. "Winds will slowly increase along the Florida east coast and will probably reach hurricane force in the area of hurricane display late tonight or early Wednesday morning."

Every man, woman and child was making businesslike preparations.

They boarded up houses and bought extra food and gasoline supplies to last through the expected emergency. They ripped up carpets and packed them with loose objects on shelves above table level.

Crews move all boats and coastal craft inland above tidewater. The 200 soldiers still stationed at Morrison Field were evacuated from their wooden barracks.

(The British government ordered a relief ship to Great Abaco, fearing severe damage on the low-lying strand, advices from Nassau said.)

Jacksonville, which last night seemed the storm's target but now was 125 miles north of the hurricane warning belt, had virtually completed its precautions. These were kept in effect lest the storm again change its course.

Beauty parlors did a land-office business during the day, and many huricane parties were planned as friends decided to gather and await the storm.

A serious traffic jam developed in downtown Miami as residents dashed around laying in emergency supplies. Miami's acres of plate glass began to disappear behind storm shutters, military posts were alerted and 7000 men at Macdill Field in Tampa were made ready for rescue work.

Midway Leaves Norfolk For Storm Anchorage

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 16 (AP).—The 45,000-ton aircraft carrier Midway sailed late today to join 30 smaller naval ships ordered to anchor 44 miles from Norfolk, to ride out any rough weather caused by the Atlantic hurricane.

The Army evacuated planes today from Langley Field.

Coast Guard spokesmen said they have a plan to evacuate personnel from four exposed lifeboat stations at Nags Head, Atlantic and Hatteras Inlet, N. C., and Wash Woods, Va., if the hurricane hits.

The several thousand civilian employes of the assembly and repair departments of the Norfolk Naval Air Station were instructed not to report for work today. The Navy flew 450 aircraft to New York State airfields yesterday.

Judge Grants Divorce; Bars Golf Widow Plea

Milwaukee, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—A man can't play too much golf as long as he takes time out to support his family, Circuit Judge William Shaughnessy ruled today on a divorce complaint. He granted Mrs. Elaine Stehlow a divorce from her husband, Edmund Strehlow, on grounds of mental cruelty.

But he tossed out Mrs. Strehlow's charge that her husband played too much golf.

Truman's Ship Skirts Storm

By Frank L. Dennis
Post Reporter

Aboard USS Missouri, Sept. 16.—That hurricane ahead seems very eager to meet the Missouri, but the President's ship is being very reluctant.

Steaming at only 15 knots now, after having already lost considerable mileage yesterday, and maneuvering to launch planes and drones, the Missouri is willing to go out of her course to avoid rough weather.

Bagged at 2000 Yards

The third time the radio-controlled drone, having a 9½ foot fuselage, 13½ foot wingspread, came in range, it was knocked out of the sky 2000 yards off the port side at 1500 feet altitude, as the crew applauded and the President smiled.

Weapons used were 40 millimeters. These saved the Missouri from Kamikazes in April of 1945 when the Missouri, as Halsey's flagship, was a revenge target off Okinawa after the Jap flagship Yamato had been sunk.

Two Kamikazes hit the ship. The pilot of one was dead when the plane skimmed the length of the "Mo," glanced off astern and its 1000-pound bomb exploded in the sea and lifted the stern. The other hit aft, level with the main deck, the pilot skidding across the deck and a flaming wing setting a fire amidships. The bomb already had been dropped at another ship.

More Practice Today

More marksmanship practice; this time by 5-inchers, will be on tomorrow's program.

At 8 a. m. tomorrow the Missouri will be 200 miles south of Bermuda.

Labor Plans Stand On Affidavit Rule

Framing of Policy on Red Affiliations Seen Major Issue of Two Conventions

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Labor leaders who want hearings in the National Labor Relations Board are fighting the rule that requires AFL and CIO officers to swear they are not Communists.

Upon the outcome may hang the Taft-Hartley policy of American labor. Framing this policy will be the biggest job of the AFL and CIO conventions which meet next month.

Fidgeting under pressure from both sides of the fight, NLRB took it up in a long session yesterday, but did not act. Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, asked the board to take up at once the appeals of several CIO unions which are opposed to the rule. Joseph A. Padway, AFL general counsel, also went before the board, to ask for a special meeting to change the rule by straight board action, without going through the red tape of raising the question by appeal.

Padway said if NLRB did not act on his request "within a reasonable time" the AFL would go to the courts with a test case. He indicated that a "reasonable time" would be before the AFL convention starts in San Francisco on October 6.

There was no comment from the board.

How Dispute Began

Here's how the dispute began:

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, NLRB has power to hear complaints of unfairness, hold plant elections and certify unions as bargaining agents and settle other issues between labor and management. But the act says no union shall have any standing before NLRB "unless there is on file with the board an affidavit . . . by each officer of such labor organization and the officers of any national or international labor organization of which it is an affiliate or constituent unit that he is not a member of the Communist Party or affiliated with such party, and that he does not believe in, and is not a member of, or supports any organization that believes in or teaches, the overthrow of the United States Government by force or by any illegal or unconstitutional methods."

Filing a false statement would be perjury.

Robert N. Denham, NLRB general counsel, ruled these words meant all officers of the CIO must file statements before any CIO union, or even local, could be heard in a case before the NLRB. And also, that all AFL officers must file, before AFL cases could be heard.

The CIO top leadership met the passage of the act with a promise to disobey its ban on union's spending money in politics and union papers printing political comment. Already the CIO has done both, and nothing has happened except that FBI agents called on Allen L. Swim, the CIO public relations chief.

The CIO leadership has not signed the non-Communist statements, but has left the matter to the CIO convention, which meets in Boston on October 13. The convention probably will be against CIO officials signing the statements.

William Green, AFL president, wanted his officers to file statements and they were expected to do so until last week, when the AFL executive council met in Chicago. Then John L. Lewis refused, and tied up the council. He was able to do so because under Denham's ruling as long as one AFL officer refused to sign no AFL officer had any standing before NLRB.

Daniel J. Tobin, an AFL vice president and head of the teamsters, signed anyway.

Tobin to Lead Fight

Tobin is sure to lead a fight in the AFL convention for a policy of compliance with the Taft-Hartley Act. Green and others will back him up, with Lewis fighting for a solid AFL front against compliance.

As the Taft-Hartley Act was passed, it was clear that there were two courses open to labor:

1. To submit to the act, keep on fighting cases before NLRB and campaign for repeal or change of the law—which, before its passage, was roundly attacked by nearly all labor.

2. To ignore the act, boycott the NLRB (where unions would have no standing unless they obeyed the law), carry on negotiations and strikes just as though there were no NLRB. In short, to take labor relations back to the conditions that prevailed before the Wagner Act became law.

AFL leaders mostly leaned toward the first policy. They said that even a crippled NLRB, which clamped stiff new conditions on unions, was better than none. They added that a policy of conciliation and cooperation with NLRB would win more public favor than straight defiance, and would do more to get the Taft-Hartley Act wiped off the books.

See NLRB's 'Ruin'

Those who favored the second policy argued that the Taft-Hartley Act had ruined the NLRB for labor. After a union bowed to the new rules and filed the statements required, these leaders said, it would get nothing for its pains, because the NLRB was now so hedged about with conditions and so full of chances for delay that it could give no effective relief in a union case.

At first, it seemed some unions would follow one policy and some the other. Then came Denham's ruling, which opened up the way for a solid labor policy of defiance. As long as Denham's ruling stands, any one officer of the AFY can keep all AFL unions out of the NLRB. And any CIO officer can keep all CIO unions out of the board.

Affidavits Are Pivot

Whether Denham's ruling stands or falls, the non-Communist statements will be the pivot for the whole labor policy toward the act.

If the ruling stands, those who want to file statements and obey the act in other ways will have to purge officers who refuse to file. If the ruling is set aside by the NLRB, those who do not want to obey the act will have to fight their policy made the policy of the AFL and CIO. If they win in the conventions, they will have to on fighting to make the AFL and CIO affiliates obey the policy.

dignation at an attempt to deprive a citizen of his home because of his religion.

But, said Noyes, "The question is left unsettled as to whether these restrictive covenants are valid or not, and consequently of the legal right of Mr. Tushin to own and occupy his home."

Noyes declared he will file, on behalf of the Tushins, a suit in the Circuit Court of Montgomery County asking for a declaratory judgment invalidating this type of restrictive covenant, on the grounds that it is a violation of the Constitution of the United States and is against public policy.

The first suit was filed because, according to the nine complainants, Aaron Tushin is "of the Semitic Race, blood or Jews, and/or Hebrews." On this ground, the plaintiffs contended, Tushin's residence in Bannockburn Heights was illegal; it violated a covenant. Mrs. Tushin's residence, on the other hand was legal. Mrs. Tushin is not "of the Semitic Race, etc."

Statement by Plaintiffs

The nine plaintiffs issued the following statement yesterday:

"We, the undersigned, residents of Bannockburn Heights, have today instructed Attorney James H. Pugh, who filed a petition in the Montgomery Circuit Court naming Aaron Tushin as defendant, to withdraw the petition and dismiss the action.

"We nine plaintiffs signed the original petition believing it proper to ask the court to determine the validity of a covenant to which all property owners had agreed by written contract.

"In view of the fact that the defendant and others are attempting to make a racial and religious issue out of a purely legal or contractural matter, we are withdrawing the petition until such time as it can be brought up as a purely legal issue."

When notice of the suit first reached the press, the nine plaintiffs were beseiged with telephone calls from morning until night. Some of the calls began with "Hell Hitler." All were hostile.

The Tushins also were beset with telephone calls, from persons who offered them legal advice, sympathy, and other aid to combat what these persons called a violation of democratic principles.

A reporter from The Washington Post interviewed residents of the area and others to obtain a complete picture.

One woman refused to say anything except "See my lawyer," and "No comment." Another, who insisted there was no issue involved except a legal one, told her husband: "Don't tell this reporter anything. Let her find out the hard way."

Tushin Sees Racial Issue

Aaron Tushin, 49-year-old patent atttorney for the Commerce Department, and center of the case, said: "They contend there is no racial issue involved. There must be a racial issue involved. People don't go around filing suits as an intellectual exercises, just to see if laws are valid."

From conversation with Bannockburn residents, The Washington Post was able to piece together what preceded the formal court action instituted by the nine residents, which started the Tushins case.

None of the persons who filed the suit were acquainted with the Tushins. None of those persons lived in the immediate neighborhood. None of them was even within "shouting distance" of the Tushins. It is just about half a mile from the Tushin home to the homes of four of the five plaintiff families.

The whole thing started in the mind of one woman.

Through some process not revealed to The Washington Post, she decided that Tushin was a Jew. After she thought about it for awhile, she talked to her husband regarding this condition of Tushin's birth.

Either then or later, this family remembered that Bannockburn Heights is convenanted, and that one of the covenants excludes Jews, Persians, Syrians, any person of the Semitic race, and Negroes, except as domestics.

Women Aswed to Sign

The woman who had decided Tushin was a Jew asked some of the other women in th eneighborhood to discuss the matter with her.

To one of these, she said, "if you don't sign a petition declaring that Tushin has broken the covenant, and should leave, the value of your property will go down $5000 within a year."

The neighbor replied: "I don't care if my property depreciaets $10,000 a year. I wouldn't sign a thing like that."

There were others who were antipathetic to the idea. It became a matter of discussion in car pools. One man became so disgusted with the bickering about the Tushins that he said he wasn't going to ride in a car pool any more.

The Bannockburn Citizens Association, approached by those favorable to covenant action, and to which most of the 52 families in the area belong, refused to indorse any legal action against the Tushins.

Eventually, the "problem" of the Tushins was taken to the realtors who had developed the property.

Then it began. Tushin received an anonymous phone call from someone who wanted to know his "nationality." He refused to give this information.

He was visited by a man who purported to be gathering vital statistics for the neighborhood, and was asked to give his "nationality." He asked the purpose of the statistics, and was told that they were in connection with his intended purchase of real estate. Tushin told his questioner that he already had purchased real estate; that there must be some mistake.

Asked to Conference

Tushin received a communication from a law firm in Washington which represents the real estate company of Phillips, Canby and Fuller, which developed the property. A conference was requested at which his "violation" of the covenant would be discussed. He was notified that if he refused to attend such a conference, legal action would be instituted.

Tushin informed the attorneys that he was not interested in conferring with them on his alleged violation of the covenants. The suit, signed by nine plaintiffs who are property owners in Bannockburn, was filed April 11, 1947, by James H. Pugh, an attorney retained by the real estate company. It read in part:

". . . The continued occupancy of the premises by the defendant, Aaron Tushin, in the subdivision of Bannockburn Heights, in violation of the aforesaid covenant, is injurious and is causing the plaintiffs irreparable damage, for which they have no adekuate remedy at law."

The court was asked to restrain Aaron Tushin from occupying the premises; his wife from permitting him to occupy the premises. The court was asked "forever and permanently" to enjoin Aaron Tushin from holding title to the lot he and his wife jointly own.

Tushin explained to The Washington Post that he and his wife purchased the house in January, 1946, from Charles and Hilda French, who had built it and who now live in New York. He said that at the time of purchase, he did not receive a deed to the house, since it was being held by a bank which had mortgaged the property. The deed states only "subject to building restrictions and covenants." The covenant is on file in the Rockville court.

Unaware of Covenant

Tushin said he was not informed by the original owner of the property that it was covenanted, and that he was not aware of the covenant prohibiting Jews until he made inquiries after the first anonymous phone call caused him to become suspicious.

When he learned of the covenant, Tushin said he was loathe to move from the premises. Mrs. Tushin was pregnant. Houses were hard to find. He said he talked the matter over with Medford P. Canby of the real estate firm. Tushin said Canby told him he hated to push him, but that he had to do something—the whole neighborhood was pressing for action.

The Tushins wondered. Some of their near neighbors were quick to inform them that the whole neighbodhood was NOT in sympathy with the plea of the covenanters. One neighbor made a special trip to see the Tushins to express her indignation.

The Tushins waited. "We thought we had several friends out here," Tushin said. "Now we are not so sure."

Yesterday, the Tushins were notified that the case had been formally dropped by Attonrey Pugh at the behest of the plaintiffs.

Said Mrs. Tushin: "I have been under terrific strain and I am glad to be relieved of the strain. However, both Mr. Tushin and I are sorry that the court hadn't the opportunity to hand down a legal decision on the question involved." The decision to ask a declaratory judgment followed.

Was the question originally involved one of the legality of a covenant; or was it a racial question?

Statements by Plaintiffs

Here is what the plaintiffs in the case said:

Mrs. Estelle H. Webb, 6709 Selkirk dr.: "I have no comment to make. I suggest you see my attorney. Of course there is no racial issue involved."

J. Otis Garber, chief of the field service of the Budget Bureau and a resident at 6622 Braeburn pkwy.: "I have friends of many races and nationalities. I am a Protestant. But the newspapers are fanning this thing into a fire and it isn't fair. It's just a question of principle. I would feel the same way if somebody built a garage in their front yard. That also would violate the covenant."

room will radio the complaint to scout cars for action where necessary.

If the complaint is brought to a precinct, policemen are ordered to fill out a standardized form and telephone or dispatch it as soon as practicable to the central complaint room.

There, the complaint forms will be collected and tabulated for statistical purposes. A record of any known local criminal should be immediately obtainable.

With these aids, cases will be investigated. Under proposals, even crimes as minor as simple assault or petty larcencies must be assigned to plain-clothes detectives instead of uniformed men who now handle them.

It is intended that time will be saved in each step from the recipt of the original complaint to solution of the crime.

To head this up, Captain Agnew, who is 47 years old, brings 23 years of experience as a policeman. He has four commendations to his credit, and was a member of the D. C. Boxing Commission. Currently, he is assigned to administrative duties in the executive offices of the force. He has been in charge, recently, of appointing recruits and checking their records and recommendations.

The others promoted will not necessarily be used to aid Agnew. But the increase in ranking personnel will make it easier, according to Barrett, to shift from other jobs the two lieutenants and two sergeants he wants for the new set-up.

Yesterday's promotions included:

1. Detective Sergt. Ray Aggleson made lieutenant. He also is 47 years old and was appointed a policeman in 1924. He is a graduate of the National Police Academy.

2. Acting Lieut. Carl D. Schamp to lieutenant. He has been assigned to the Capitol since 1940. He is 46 years old and has been on the force since 1925.

3. Corp. Howard F. Mowry to sergeant. He is 34 years old and a policeman for 12 years. Also a police academy graduate, he was once rewarded for capturing a deserter from the Marine Corps.

4. Corp. John W. Nally to sergeant. Born in 1911, Nally is an expert radio technician and has been assigned to radio work for the Police Department. He became a policeman in 1936. In 1938, he was exonerated of blame in the slaying of a negro World War I veteran.

5. Sergt. Daniel F. Donoghue to temporary lieutenant. He is 49 years old and has been a policeman for 20 years. He is presently assigned to the Capitol.

Jury Declines to Return Indictment on Clegg Charges considered by the grand jury," said Gray. "Though I haven't seen the police report yet, I can't see how the grand jury action would affect our study."

Clegg, night employe of The Washington Post, filed complaint through Attorney Roger Robb that police took him in custody on oral complaint of a white waitress, at 6 a. m., August 2. The waitress, who charged that he addressed her lewdly, was unable to identify him as her molester.

Clegg said he was illegally held for 34 hours before his eventual release without charge. During that time, he complained, two detective sergeants of the police sex squad beat, cursed and threatened him without provocation. He identified the two from a line-up of 10 men, but their identity has never been disclosed publicly.

More Than Score Heard

The jury sat on the Clegg matter for four afternoons, hearing testimony from more than a score of witnesses. No action was announced at the conclusion of the final session Monday.

Yesterday morning, the case was reported out under the list of charges ignored, simply as:

"In re complaint of Julius Clegg. Ignored."

When asked to comment yesterday on the jury decision and say what further action might be taken, Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett said he might "possibly" send the police department report of its investigation in the Clegg case to District Corporation Counsel. He added, however:

"The grand jury is the fairest body in the world, isn't it? You wouldn't want my men persecuted, would you? I know I wouldn't."

Barrett and Detective Chief Floyd A. Truscott jointly recommended grand jury study of Clegg's complaint of assault after the department investigation of the complaint. The two also recommended District Corporation Counsel study of the civil charges.

Witnesses who appeared before the grand jury included:

Clegg; his wife, Mrs. Gussie Mae Clegg; their apartment house neighbor, Mrs. Marian J. Bridges, of 1106 21st st. ne.; Charles E. Davis, jr., Washington Post reporter who interviewed Clegg; Robert Bruskin, Washington Post reporter who interviewed witnesses.

Police Pvt. J. G. Gibboney, of No. 1 Police Precinct, who took Clegg in custody; Acting Lieut. Richard McCarthy, head of the police sex squad; Detective Sergeants David S. Ennis and Alexander J. Kapsol, sex squad investigators.

Four fellow prisoners of Clegg at No. 1 Precinct, two of whom identified themselves as Elcer A. Clayton of 469 I st. nw., and Warren Smith of 613 New Jersey ave. nw.

Detective Chief Truscott; Pvt. George Burkley, of the police missing persons bureau; Capt. Robert Pearce, commanding officer of No. 1 Police Precinct; Sergt. John C. Daniels, precinct detective at No. 10 Police Precinct.

Roger Robb, attorney for Clegg; Dr. Hugh Browne of 1923 Benning rd. ne., physician who attended Clegg, and four witnesses who refused to tell their roles in the investigations.

Tafts Flings at Truman in Promising 'Program of Progress'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Los Angeles, Calif., Sept. 16.—Senator Robert A. Taft today promised a GOP "program of progress," including health, education and other welfare measures but hinted at a stalemate in social legislation until Republicans win the presidency.

He told a picketed town hall meeting here:

"I have found Republicans loath to proceed with any program of this kind if the initial setting up is assumed by the present Administration."

Striking directly at President Truman, for the first time on this western tour, he charged the Administration refused to cooperate with the Republican Congress. He said GOP legislators feared Mr. Truman will appoint men out of sympathy with any GOP welfare program.

Meeting Picketed

Some 30 workers, mostly members of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers CIO local, picketed the town hall meeting in the sumptuous Ambassador Hotel.

Another picket line was billed to form outside the Elks' Club tonight in protest against a second speech defending the Eightieth Congress and the Taft-Hartley Act.

The town hall picketers mostly paraded outside of the hotel, but some of them marched into the lobby bearing placards denouncing the labor act and reading: "We have to eat less. How about you Mr. Taft?"

Taft told the town hall audience of 1200 that Republicans are reluctant to launch welfare measures under Truman because the Administration "still believes in concentration of all power in Washington and in the constant increase of Federal power and Federal spending.

"We hope very much that our program may be inaugurated under a Republican President in 1949," he said.

Charging that none of the three men Mr. Truman named to the labor board had any real sympathy with the purposes of Congress," he declared the only real cooperation last session was on bi-partisan foreign policy.

Even there, he insisted, no Republicans were consulted until the policy was ready to be announced.

Citing his own sponsorship of housing, health and education bills, he told the meeting:

"The Republican Party believes that the Federal Government should proceed with a program of public welfare, but they are absolutely opposed to measures which give the Government control ond regulation over the field of health, housing and education, where the responsibility and the administartion rest primarily on local and State Governments."

In his own bills, he said, he provided for "Federal assistance" but left administration strictly to State and local governments.

Switch in Auspices

Today's luncheon speech was originally booked under Republican auspices. Before Taft's arrival in California, the State GOP committee got it town hall sponsorship. Reports persist that Warren strategists made the shift without Taft's advance knowledge, but Gov. Earl Warren denies it.

Warren's grip on the State is still the chief topic in GOP circles. Taft, in his speech today, went out of his way to pay homage to the Governor, who is making no commitments to visiting firemen.

Howard J. McMurray, former Democratic Congressman from Wisconsin, told at a luncheon yesterday that in his opinion "Taft will stop Dewey" and Governor Warren has "perhaps the best chance" of winning the GOP presidential nomination.

There is some Stassen sentiment here, but the boomlet for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in the East apparently hasn't filtered this far West.

Before and after his town hall speech, Taft received a steady line of vistors, ranging all the way from Moran Kraft, incoming president of the California Banks' Association, to a mixed group on all sides of the housing question.

The latter included representatives of local housing authorities, the local realty board and the building trades council.

"I don't think I will have to talk," said Taft. "I think they can argue it out themselves."

Fires at Union Leaders

Taft devoted much of his Town Hall speech to the argument he made in Santa Cruz that more than half of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act are to the advantage of individual workers. Again he directed his fire at union leaders themselves, saying "the people do not propose to let the labor leaders run this Government." The audience appeared to be with him. There was much cheering, and boes were lacking.

During the question and answer period he was quizzed on United States relations with Russia.

"Russia is more concerned about methods of spreading its ideology than in making war," Taft replied. "It is not easy to combat that idealogy. I don't think we should yield anything that wil lencourage the spread of Russian ideology any further than it has gone . . . I believe we should oppose any Russian aggression just as we have done."

Taft said he does not favor any aid to countries in the Russian orbit, though he would not discriminate between Communist and non-Communists in famine relief to Western Europe.

"They are much better off for food east of the iron curtain than they are west of it," he said.

Revolutionized Naval Ordnance Predicted

London, Sept. 16 (U.P.)—Janes Fighting Ships, the unofficial but accepted authority on world naval strength, predicted today that within the next two years the use of rockets will have revolutionized naval ordnance.

Janes rated the United States Navy as the world's strongest, with Britain second. It pointed out that "information concerning the Russian fleet continues to be scanty."

Truman Plans to Pass Up Barnstorming Tour

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman, now sailing home from Rio, has made up his mind to stick close to the White House and to do no barnstorming across the United States in the remaining months of 1947.

Mr. Truman, according to associates, is content to let Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio and other Republican presidential aspirants have a monopoly on cross-country political tours this year.

The Chief Executive is returning to Washington at a time when the world situation is at a crucial stage.

Foreign Trips Criticized

His intimates believe that, even if he could spare the time, it would be a mistake in strategy for him to accept the advice of some Democrats that he board a slow train and travel around the country so that his fellow Americans can get a look at him.

This suggestion, put forward from time to time, frequently has been accompanied with the remark that Mr. Truman could pick up no votes in Mexico City, Ottawa or Rio de Janeiro.

Mr. Truman, his aides and State Department officials feel that his trips to those cities have been highly important, not only from the standpoint of good will but from the standpoint of giving the Old World an example in true neighborliness.

One Political Job

Anyway, Mr. Truman is convinced that the best politics at this stage is no politics; at least, no brazen politics.

Just the same, he will have to take action in a political situation soon after he returns here Saturday. This involves the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee, which Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan is expected to relinquish whenever a successor can be decided upon.

A few weeks ago, it was reliably reported that Mr. Truman wanted Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson to take over the chairmanship and run his '48 campaign. The latest word on this is that Anderson is out of the picture.

Sullivan in Running

Among those said to be very much in the picture are Gael Sullivan, now executive director of the National Committee; United States Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, and former Representative Joseph E. Casey of Massachusetts.

Once President Truman and Postmaster General Hannegan settle on a new chairman, a meeting of the Democratic National Committee will be called to ratify the choice. The committee at the same time will pick a city for the 1948 Democratic National Convention.

Edward T. Keeley has been in Washington sounding out the chances of Atlantic City, N. J., as a convention site. Other cities under consideration are San Francisco, Los Angeles and Philadelphia. Chicago appears to be out of the running.

Jackson Asks Revision of Rules of War

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 16 (AP).—Justice Robert H. Jackson of the Supreme Court tonight countered a Soviet demand for a ban on use of the atomic bomb with a demand for complete revision of the rules of war.

Jackson

Especially needed, he said, are rules on the use of air power and treatment of prisoners, subscribed to by all powers including Russia.

At the same time Jackson said the United States had a great opportunity to contribute to a century of peace by building an air force so strong that no one would doubt its ability to defeat any attacker.

Jackson addressed the first convention of the Air Force Association.

The Justice, who was chief American prosecutor at the Nazi war crimes trial at Nuernberg, Germany, expressed belief that "despite outward appearances, circumstantial evidence seems convincing that the Soviet leaders want, at all hazards, to avoid actual war with the United States, at least in the near future."

Cites World Tension

But he cautioned that in a world situation "so tense with cometition and struggle, a slight fumble on either side might provide the 'incident' that would precipitate an unwanted war. And if history teaches us to have confidence in anything, it is in the almost infinite capacity of statesmen to fumble."

Jackson charged that "Americans in places of responsibility" were helping Russian propaganda aimed at putting on the United States "the onus of aggression."

These Americans, he said, are doing this by "careless, threatening or boastful words." He did not name those to whom he referred.

"Russia apparently is fearful that war may come in spite of all legal obstancles," he said. "She was within the last few days demanded revision of the rules as to the manner in which war may be conducted. Andrei Gromyko, Soviet deputy foreign minister, demands a pact that will prohibit, or control, use of the atomic bomb.

Calls for Revision

"This Soviet demand for new rules of warfare, significantly limited to one particular weapon, naturally raises the question as to whether the laws of war do not need revision or amplification in other respects. My experience indicates that they do."

Present laws, the Justice said, are most deficient in failing to define the permissable and impermissible uses of modern air power. As as another example he cited rules for treatment of prisoners and charged:

"The whole mechanism by which the modern world has sought to give vitality to the principle of humane treatment of prisoners is at a standstill with Russia." The Soviet government, Jackson explained, never became a party to the Geneva Convention which dealt with handling of prisoners.

The commanding general of the strategic air command lashed out, meanwhile at what he termed American complacency over military preparedness.

"Nothing could be more dangerous to our national safety," said Gen. George C. Kenney at the convention.

"There are already known weapons of mass destruction more deadly and far cheaper than the atomic bomb which can be quickly produced.

"There are aircraft in the hands of potential enemies which can carry these weapons to this country."

Air Force Group Elects Lanphier

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 16 (AP).—Thomas G. Lanphier, jr., of Boise, Idaho, the fighter pilot who shot down the transport carrying Japanese Admiral Yamamoto, was elected today as president of the Air Force Association.

U. S. Asks Quick Action on World Police Force, Airing Veto 'Misuse' of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Aranha's election was the chief surprise and the only remotely dramtic event at the beginning of an Assembly session that is expected to produce plain speaking and heated debates on Greece, the Balkans, Palestine and other highly charged issues.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall, in personal command of the American delegation here, will state the American position tomorrow morning, when the general debate begins.

Opposed to Evatt

The outnumbered Soviet bloc of six nations came to the opening session this morning determined to prevent the election of Australia's foreign minister, Herbert V. Evatt, who had the backing of the United States and most of the western European countries for the presidency.

Nobody has been as outspoken as Evatt in the last two years in fighting the veto power in the Security Council and in attacking Soviet policies generally. The Russians were bent on keeping him from the Assembly presidency, which is a post not only of great honor, but also of great parliamentary power in the Assembly's debates.

Their favorite son in the balloting was Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk of Czechoslovakia. They knew he had no chance of winning, but he might get enough votes to prevent Evatt from getting the required majority of the 55 nations here.

Meantimee, the powerful Latin-American group—the biggest bloc in the Assembly—was insistent that Aranha run, although he had professed that he wanted to withdraw.

Vishinsky Calls Delegates

This morning, foreseeing a deadlock in the voting, the Latin-American caucused and then sent Ambassador Guillermo Belt of Cuba to see Andrei Vishinsky, the head of the Soviet delegation. Vishinsky promptly called his satellite delegates together.

It was obvious that the Latin Americans were saying to the Russians: "We don't expect you to vote for our man on the first ballot, but if there is no majority, we hope you will switch to Aranha on the second."

It turned out as the Latin Americans foreseen. The first ballot produced 26 votes for Aranha, 23 for Evatt and 6 for Masaryk.

Under the assembly's rules, a second ballot must be a choice between the two highest candidates. When the result was announced in the crowded assembly hall, Aranha had 29 and Evatt 22, with four votes invalid. The Soviet nations had switched their votes—not that they particularly liked or trusted Aranha, but they were out to beat Evatt at all costs.

Prime Minister Paul Spaak of Belgium, who was a masterly president last year, let it be known that he could not run for election this year, as he probably would not b eable to stay the full assembly session.

Manuilsky Elbowed

The Latin-Soviet voting alliance did not, however, last long. To their own astonishment the Latins found they had elected two of the seven Assembly vice presidents, elbowing Dmitri Manuilsky of the Ukraine out of a position that had been earmarked for him by informal agreement of the Big Five delegations.

For the seventh vice presidency there was a tie vote between Manuilsky and Belt of Cuba. Aranha, as president, decided the issue by pulling a ballot for Belt out of the box. The other vice presidencies went to the Big Five and Mexico. The big vote against Manuilsky was a protest against his bitterly criticized work last year as chairman of the political committee, the 55-nation group that handles most of the major issues that come before the Assembly.

The political committee should have more courtly and skillful chairmanship this year, for the assembly elected Foreign Minister Joseph Bech of Luxembourg to the post by an overwhelming vote over Foreign Minister Zygmunt Modzelewski of Poland. Vishinsky went to the rostrum to plead that the wartime sacrifices of the Slavic countries entitled them to the honor, but the Assembly thought otherwise.

Bech has been called the wisest diplomat in Europe because of his long experience in international meetings, stretching back to the early days of the League of Nations. In his appearance and manner he suggests the late Aristide Briand of France at the height of his power. His election was warmly supported by the United States, the United Kingdom and France.

The committee chairmanships decided today are of some importance for two reasons: Firstly, those who hold them are automatically members of the steering or general committee, which decides which subjects can go into the Assembly's agenda; and secondly, the skill and steadiness of the chairman can influence the debates of the six committees where most of the assembly's work is done.

The economic and financial committee, which may run into an oblique discussion of the Marshall plan for Europe, will be headed by Herman Santa Cruz, Chile's permanent delegate to the United Nations. The social and humanitarian committee will be led by Oscar Lange of Poland, nominated by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the American delegate on this group.

The committee on trusteeship will have Sir Carl Berendsen of New Zealand as its chairman. For the administrative and budgetary committee, Justice Fazli Ali, the delegate from newly independent India, was named with the support of both the United Kingdom and the Soviet Union.

The legal committee, which will dicuss the crime of genocide and the codification of the Nuremberg war crimes rulings, will be headed by Faris Bey El-Khouri, Syria's representative on the Security Council.

A seventh committee, to deal exclusively with Palestine, may be created tomorrow at a meeting of the steering committee.

U. N. Delegates, Press Use Walkie-Talkies

United Nations Hall, Flushing, N. Y., Sept. 16 (U.P.).—An adaptation of the walkie-talkie made its debut today at the opening of the United Nations General Assembly.

Some 1800 earphones and receiving sets, about twice the size of a cigarette pack, were placed in the U. N. Hall for delegates, press and public.

The innovation made it possible to slip out to the bar for a quick one without missing a word of the proceedings. All they had to do was prop the sets against their highball glasses and listen in.

U. S. Pressing Swiss to Sell Reich Assets

The United States' war aim of seizing Nazi wealth hidden in neutral countries has been blocked—up to now—in Switzerland, but the State Department says it has not given up.

About 100 million dollars worth of German assets are impounded, but our experts suspect much more had gotten away. Any Nazi whose hoard has been overlooked is free to use it for political, or other, purposes.

Practically none of the German assets have been sold.

The situation had led to reports that the French, British and Americans have dropped their aim of drying up Nazi wealth. But Michael McDermott, the State Department press officer, said yesterday there was no basis for such reports and that the department is pressing for the Swiss to carry out their agreement of May, 1946.

Agreed to Sell Assets

The Swiss then agreed to round up all Nazi assets, sell them, and hand the proceeds over to the French, British and Americans. The Allies agreed to pay the German owners of the assets in marks.

The Swiss claim that cannot be done until the mark has an exchange value, which it does not have now except as one is fixed in the occupied zone. When an exchange rate is fixed it will be arbitrary and pegged by controls. The mark at present is close to worthless, except in Germany.

The lack of an exchange rate might stand in the way of settling with the German owners of the seized assets. How it could hold up seizure and sale of German assets in Switzerland is not quite clear. But that is the reason the Swiss give for stalling.

Economics Linked

However, Switzerland has other good reasons for not wanting to go through with the agreement.

First, their economy is closely tied to that of Germany, and they are afraid their business would suffer from such a widespread program.

Second, they are loath to go through with the plan unless their arms are twisted. This is because they are afraid the Germans will make a comeback and subject them to reprisals. In the Allied talk of rebuilding Germany, the Swiss see danger. On the other hand, the Swiss are not afraid the Allies will do anything to them for not going through with the agreement.

The Swiss, too, may be worried about what the Russians might think of an agreement in which Russia had no part, and out of which Russia would get nothing.

U. S. Loyalty Program Slated for Discussion

World Bank Accepts Finland as Member, Names Hoover to Council

London, Sept. 16 (AP).—The board of governors of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development approved today Finland's application for membership and accepted an agreement defining the bank's relationship with the United Nations.

Also approved was a resolution naming former United States President Herbert Hoover and eight others to a bank advisory council. They and a tenth member, yet to be chosen, will serve for two years.

Finland is the forty-sixth nation to apply for membership. She has until March 15, 1948, to join.

Membership requirements include Finnish participation in the International Monetary Fund and subscription to 380 shares of the bank's capital stock at par value of $100,000 each.

The annual meetings of the bank and fund, the second since they were organized, will close tomorrow.

Besides Hoover, members of the advisory council are Sir Arthur Salter, United Kingdom, chairman; Edward E. Brown, United States, president of the First National Bank of Chicago; R. Dickson Harkness, Canada; Leon Jouhaux, France; Pedro Beltran, Peru; Sir C. V. Raman, India; Lionel Robbins, United Kingdom; S. K. Alfred Sze, China.

Other resolutions passed by the board today authorize:

Iran to increase her bank subscription by 96 shares of capital stock at $100,000 a share. Iran's original subscription was 240 shares;

Egypt to increase her subscription from 400 shares of capital stock to 533 shares—also at the price of $100,000 a share;

An increase from 13 to 14 in the number of executive directors.

The agreement with the United Nations recognizes the bank must function as an independent international organization, but provides for closer liaison between the two in world affairs.

Tells How to Secure A Mastery of English Quickly

An interesting new booklet offered free to men and women who want to secure a real mastery of the English language tells of a "fool-proof" method for studying English usage without attending classes. The plan, as described in this little book, has been worked out by Grenville Kleiser, who has helped thousands of students to a better command of English.

According to the publishers, this world authority uses no involved rules of grammar or rhetoric, but presents a simple, straightforward, inspiring method that secures real results in very short time. Thousands of users of this method, they say, have gained increased power to express themselves in fluent, convincing, clear-cut English and so have improved their possibilities of social and business advantages.

To acquaint more men and women with the advantages of improving their understanding of English, the publishers, Funk and Wagnalls Company, have printed full details of this speedy, pleasant method in a booklet which they will send to anyone who requests it. The address is Funk and Wagnalls Company, Dept. 179, 153 East 24th Street, New York 10, New York. A penny postcard will do. There is no charge for the booklet.

Moses Warns Defeat Stigma Can Put Germany in Red Orbit

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The German people will soon make their fateful choice between American-style democracy and Russian communism, Robert Moses, New York City Park Commissioner, told the Nation last night.

Moses, who recently surveyed conditions in Germany at the request of the American Military Government, declared that "the superiority of democratic and capitalistic systems over socialism and communism is being put to a "tremendous test" in Germany.

To meet this challenge, Moses urged that this country decided upon a definite, nonpartisan plan "to put the German people on their feet." Unless we do so, he warned, the German people may turn to Russia, to share "in some gigantic communistic triumph which will wipe out the stigma of defeat and in the long run afford a chance for needed German brains and skills in a Russian autocracy."

Moses' observations, which he offered "more or less apologetically" because of the short time he was in Europe (June 26 to July 13) were withheld from publication until last night. Fears by the State Department that they might interfere with British-American discussions on Ruhr coal caused that action. These discussions were concluded last week.

American Plan Urged

Moses warned that "we cannot rely solely on the rising opposition to Communist aggression" to insure a sound American policy toward Germany. He proposed that a "definite, if tentative, American plan for Germany" be worked out at once. The War and State Departments, the President and congressional leaders of both parties should formulate such a program early enough to keep it out of the 1948 election campaign, he said.

Moses declared the American people will better understand the German problem if the sacrifices required of them are not disguised, and "the appalling alternatives are pictured in their true colors."

"Time is running against us," Moses warned. "The verdict, because of pressures abroad and at home, is not far off, and cannot be postponed."

"It is to be assumed that we have no aggressive territorial, political, or even trade ambitions to exploit in Germany, that we are opposed to the spread of communism, that we still aim to de-Nazify and demilitarize Germany, that we are hopeful of educating the German people to an understanding of freedom and individual liberty as we practice them, and that we propose to stay on long enough for at least a trial of these principles.

"We do not know, however, whether the American people are prepared to pay the bill for such a trial in the years ahead. The groundwork has not yet been laid for a favorable decision on their part."

Danger in Our Relations

Moses warned that the real danger in our relations with Germany, is that "our own forces will be cut so drastically, our appropriations and loans become so thin and inadequate, our aid so feeble, late and uncertain, that whatever German influences there may be working for independence and democracy will cease to rely on us."

If that takes place, he said, the German people "will make the best bargain they can with those who offer perhaps nothing more than the authority the Germans instinctively love."

The report described the Ruhr coal situation as "a mess." It called strongly for centralization of authority and responsibility in order to get fuel moving in large volume.

"The mines limp along under British control, American advice local regional planning, administrative and housing supervision, union representation and half a dozen other ties and influences, all operating at cross purposes," Moses stated.

Last week the United States and Britain agreed on a program putting a British-American board in overall charge of Ruhr mines, and giving Germans entire responsibility for production. Hitherto the British had sole control.

"The German people are obviously bewildered by conflicting policies within, between and among the occupying forces, sullen and apprehensive of the future, short of food, housing, and of the basic means of reestablishing industry and therefore without the hope and incentive on which recovery depends," Moses said.

Morgenthau Plan Comment

"It is quite useless," he added, "and perhaps gratuitous to bemoan the months wasted on the foredoomed failure of the so-called Morgenthau pastor plan. The most that can be said for it is that it required education by trial and error to prove to many people that it would not work."

Many German improvement after World War I were financed by money lent by this country for economic reconstruction, Moses said.

"Apparently quite a few German mayors, planners and other officials still have this in mind. They exhibit a notable enthusiasm for similar largess following the second world war they made and lost."

Moses touched briefly but pungently on the problem of displaced persons, of whom there are 350,000 in the American Zone.

Italy Unrest Grows; 2 Million on Strike

850,000 Metal Workers Walk Off Job on Call; Rome Police Alerted for 'Revolution'

Rome, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Communist-led metal workers, 850,000 strong, struck on schedule today in another phase of political manuvering designed to unseat Premier Alcide de Gasperi.

The number of idle soared to more than two million while another two million under Communist pressure threatened to quit work in the worst labor crisis in Italy's history.

Police were alerted against violence and in Rome began "rapid readiness drills." A thousand Rome policemen began "maneuvers" which will continue through tomorrow.

The Communist-designed labor unrest was building toward a gigantic nation-wide demonstration Saturday, a so-called "March of Hunger" to show the Leftist iron grip on the nation's workers.

Long Strike Predicted

The metal workers walked out for two days, but a communique issued today by the Communist-run Labor Confederation, which claims six million members, warned the stoppage may extend into a prolonged strike, paralyzing heavy industry. Reports from Milan, Turin, Naples, Rome, Piombino, Brescia, Terni, Genoa, Taranto, Bologna and Bolzano said factories there were either closed or closing.

In north Italy, a strike of one million agricultural workers went into its eighth day. Small scattered disputes idled 200,000 others. Communists also threatened to call out 2,130,000 tobacco, textile and state employes "dissatisfied" with De Gasperi's government.

Communist chief Palmiro Togliatti and leftwing socialist Pietro Nenni were believed trying to create such economic chaos that de Gasperi's cabinet of Christian Democrats and liberals would be forced to give way to a leftist regime. De Gasperi ousted both Communists and Socialists from his government 3½ months ago for failure to cooperate in reconstruction.

Further Action Hinted

Moscow-trained Togliatti, who boosted September 6 that Rome could be taken by 30,000 well-trained partisans, declared in his newspaper today that if the strikes do not produce results, "things will pass to other more accentuated forms of agitation."

Echoing him, Giuseppe Rovida, president of the Metal Workers Union, said that this is only "the beginning of the struggles."

The Catholic News Agency spoke guardedly of reports of revolution Saturday during the leftist sponsored national day of protest against the government and said responsible political circles had "exhaustively commented" on the situation, so similar to the unrest in Italy which preceded Mussolini's march on Rome.

Police headquarters said the drills were "to determine the state of preparation of police and men going through tests of modern methods for rapid development."

'Revolution' Denied

Both Nenni and Giuseppe di Vittorio, militant Communist secretary of the Labor Confederation, denied recurring revolutionary rumors. Christian Democrat labor groups have been ordered to refrain from taking part in Saturday's demonstration.

Nenni asserted, "There will not be either a revolution or preliminary steps to a revolution." Earlier, in contrast, his newspaper said, "The workers' organizations decline any responsibility for consequences a prolonged strike could have in such a vast (north) zone of Italy."

Di Vittorio said, "There will not be a revolution, none of us will work for a revolution."

Di Vittorio also announced that if the one-million-worker farm strike is not settled within 24 hours to the union's satisfaction, "I will order the workers to go into the harvest of rice and sugar beet crops and turn them over to the government. There will be trouble if proprietors try to stop us from proving our interest in the needs of the country."

Such a step would at the same time remove the danger to Italy's food supply and present Italians with the thought that the Leftists had more concern for their stomachs than De Gasperi.

Break Due Soon

Political observers reasoned that the two-week-old government-Communist deadlock must break soon or mounting labor unrest will prostrate the country. They saw these alternatives:

1. Resignation of De Gasperi or Broadening of his cabinet to include Leftists which would represent a victory for Togliatti and Nenni.
2. Further concessions to labor's economic demands.
3. Spreading strikes until there is a physical showdown with the government.

Four United States Congressmen studying Italy's future needs toured Turin industries yesterday and conferred with U. S. Consul General Richard Haven on the farm strike going on to Milan and Trieste today. The entire right-wing press stressed the importance of the committee's visit and warned labor they were jeopardizing Italy's appeals to America for help.

What? TUGBOAT ANNIE CAUGHT NAPPING?

When Tugboat Annie finally got it through her "chromium" that the crooked captain had been "pulling the bull over her eyes," Annie, "a mere female woman," went into action. What happened, of course, is wonderful, hilarious, preposterous—in the very best Tugboat Annie tradition.

Surprising facts about BABE DIDRIKSON

Sports writers are apt to let their imaginations run wild when writing about Babe Didrikson. Consequently, most of the stories aren't true. Pete Martin brings that out in his unusual interview with the greatest woman athlete in history. In his revealing article, he tells for the first time what "Marvelous Mildred" (her title for herself) is really like.

Guerilla Says Russia Plans War on U. S.

Deggendorf, Germany, Sept. 16 (AP).—A Ukrainian guerilla leader who brought his band of 39 across the Austrian border into the American zone, said in an interview today that Communist political police agents in Poland were telling the people to prepare for a Russian war against the United States.

Explaining why he and his men had come to the United States zone, he said, "We want to continue our fight against Communism."

The 26-year-old captain, calling himself Walko Jurij, explained that the Ukrainian underground army in eastern Poland and in the Soviet Ukraine was gradually being broken up because the Polish government had transferred thousands of Ukrainian peasants to East Prussia, depriving the guerillas of friends with whom they could hide and find food.

Hundreds and perhaps thousands more Ukrainians will come to the American zone, Jurij predicted.

Jurij said that if he and his men were ordered back to Poland "we will commit suicide."

Jurij said he and his unit of 150 men frequently ambushed Polish troop units. The band lived mostly in the forests but sometimes came openly among sympathetic civilians when Polish troops were absent. He said that when the Polish government offered them amnesty last year if they would surrender, none accepted.

He said his band began its flight toward American-occupied Germany June 2, and that 15 were killed and many were wounded en route in clashes with Polish troop units and Czechoslovak gendarmes. Three wounded men blew themselves up with hand grenades rather than delay the march, he said. Thirty others went into Czechoslovakia on a "special misison" and have not been heard from since, he added.

through conclusion of a peace pact.

The British move was regarded by diplomats as not bringing the conflicting East-West viewpoints on a peace settlement any nearer solution, and as opening the door to strong objection from Russia that such unilateral action prejudiced Big Four settlement of German and Austrian reparations and assets.

Austrian citizens in this country will no longer be regarded as enemy aliens.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the act was not to be regarded as a precedent for similar action regarding either Germany or Japan. He said Austria's situation was not similar to that of any other former enemy state. Neither France nor the United States were legally at war with Austria, and the United States never has recognized the 1938 annexation of Austria by the Germans.

Unlike Other Enemies

He declared Britain never had regarded Austria on the same basis as any other former enemy state. The United States has stated officially that Austria was regarded as any other territiory liberated from the Nazis.

Meanwhile, in Bucharest, the Allied Control Commission for Romania formally passed out of existence in accord with the formal deposit of the peace treaty in Moscow. In a ceremony at the Soviet Embassy—unattended by any of the other Allied missions—Soviet Ambassador A. I. Kavtaradzi informeed Premier Petru Groza and other political leaders that Romania was again a sovereign nation.

In Sofia, Deputy Chairman Lieut. Gen. Alexander Cherepanov of the Allied Control Commission for Bulgaria formally notified the other members that the commission's life had expired.

In Budapest, President Zoltan Tildy told the newly convened Parliament today Hungary's foreign policy—closely aligned to Soviet Russia — would continue unchanged under her new sovereignty.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Britain to Get $60,000,000 In Exchange for Sterling

London, Sept. 16 (AP).—The British treasury announced tonight that the International Monetary Fund had agreed to exchange 60 million dollars for British sterling within the next few days, the dollars to be used by Britain for any general trade purpose.

A spokesman for the monetary fund said the exchange was permitted under the fund's charter which provides that a member may exchange its own currency for other national currencies up to 25 per cent of its contribution to the fund. Under the charter Britain is entitled to exchange up to 325 million dollars, provided the board of governors approves.

Earlier, a government informant had disclosed that Britain may soon ask the International Bank for a 320 million dollars loan to help rebuild her war-damaged industrial machine and put it in shape for Britain's xeport drive.

The British said the loan would not violate the bank's charter against "stop gap" relief if Britain earmarked the money for reconstruction and development.

A Board of Trade spokesman said such a loan also would not be contrary to the government's announced policy of curtailing capital expenditures for industrial equipment.

Britain's borrowing capacity in the bank represents one of her last possible sources of dollars. Yesterday Britain sold 80 million dollars worth of gold to the United States for dollars.

[United States Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder talked with Prime Minister Clement Attlee and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin today, the United Press reported.

["I just listened," Snyder said after the talks. He said neither he nor Bevin mentioned Bevin's proposal for redistribution of Fort Knox gold. Snyder will meet later with other British officials.]

[Setting the government pattern for an all-out production drive, Sir Stafford Cripps called upon textile workers today to put in longer hours to speed cotton production.]

Danes Spurn British Food Price Offers

London, Sept. 16.—Britain's food supply was thrown into further jeopardy today when it was disclosed that negotiations with Denmark for butter, eggs and bacon had broken down completely over the question of price.

The Danish government granted its farmers a subsidy last year to hold down prices with Britain but did not want to go on subsidizing this year.

Europe's Plan For Self-Help Ready Monday

By Sidney Keller

Paris, Sept. 16.—Leaders of the 16-Nation Economic Conference met today with three top-ranking United States advisers for the Marshall Plan and announced that the "preliminary" report on their inventoried needs and four-year plans for self-help and mutual aid will be completed Monday.

Publication of the report had previously been delayed because of American requests for more detailed information.

Will Clayton, United States Undersecretary of State for economic affairs, who attended the informal meeting today together with Jefferson Caffery and Lewis Douglas, the United States Ambassadors to France and to Britain, indicated the report now appears to have met most of the major objections, save for the basic requirement that the 16 nations form a permanent organization.

Sir Oliver Frank, conference chairman, said he hoped that before adjournment Monday there would be a unanimous vote in favor of forming a more permanent organization.

British 'Shocked' By Bid to Cut Tariffs

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—A new United States request for sweeping tariff reductions in the British Empire was variously described by British sources at the Trade and Tariff Conference today as a "shock," "fantastic" and "out of proportion."

British sources said the United States attitude had stiffened suddenly and apparently without reason.

Clegg Case

The decision of the grand jury to ignore the charges brought by Julius Willie Clegg to the effect that he was beaten by two sex-squad detectives and held by the police for 34 hours without charge strengthens a dangerous impression that citizens may be mistreated with impunity in the District of Columbia. This action comes on the heels of the Commissioners' order restoring Private James A. Stewart to duty after he was convicted by the Police Trial Board of beating a student. Policemen with a strain of brutality in their nature will not fail to note the large degree of license these actions suggest.

One other aspect of the Clegg case is disturbing. District Attorney Fay was not content to present the charges against the police to the grand jury. He also presented their defense, in effect turning the grand jury into a trial court. The general practice is to lay the Government's case before the grand jury, and it is the duty of that body to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to warrant indictment and trial of the accused. When all the witnesses on both sides are summoned, the procedure becomes a trial without the safeguards that surround a hearing in court. Certainly that procedure is unsatisfactory when the police are permitted to rebut the prima facie case made by the complainant without cross-examination, as happened in this instance.

Whatever may be said for the action of the grand jury, however, it has not disposed of the issue of whether the men charged with beating a citizen and holding him 34 hours on no charge whatever should remain on the police force. There is no criminal penalty for jailing a citizen after the NKVD fashion, but at least there is an obligation on the part of the Police Trial Board to discipline any officer found guilty of such practices. We hope that the Corporation Counsel will promptly go ahead with his investigation of the case to determine whether action before a Police Trial Board is indicated. From the evidence available to us it appears that not only the two sex-squad detectives who are charged with administering the beating but also the head of the sex squad, who was present at the time, and the police officers at the First Precinct who held the victim without charge should be brought before a trial board.

Voluntary Rationing

Voluntary rationing—a fancy term for common sense and self-restraint in buying and eating food—is dictated alike by selfish and by humanitarian considerations. In the absence of effective governmental action, it affords the only checkrein upon spiraling prices. And it is indispensable if we are to share our bounty with the people overseas again confronting a winter of hunger. Secretary of Commerce Harriman, Acting Secretary of Agriculture Dodd and Chester Davis, who last year spearheaded the country's voluntary conservation effort through the Famine Emergency Committee, are in agreement that action to save wheat needed by starving humans abroad from being fed to livestock here is imperative. New York's Mayor O'Dwyer deserves hearty commendation for taking the initiative and urging two meatless days a week in that city's public eating places.

Voluntary rationing is at best, however, an uncertain and inequitable method of conservation. Not everyone can be counted on to participate. Some fail to share through selfishness, others because they are not fully convinced of the need. And of course one reason people remain unconvinced of the reality of the crisis is that rationing is left upon a voluntary basis. They reason that the Government would act to require participation if there were any genuine need. In our own view, as we have said before, the rationing of basic foods by the Government is the one indubitably effective way to meet our foreign commitments and at the same time avoid disastrous price increases.

Unless and until such rationing can be instituted through act of a Congress not now in session, voluntary conservation is imperative. An appeal for this kind of saving is doubtless the best way to make the American people understand the urgency of the situation abroad and the need for self-restraint at home. The experience of last year can leave no doubt of a ready and generous public response once the problem is clearly understood.

To Buttress Security

An atmosphere of expectancy prevails at Lake Success, where the United Nations General Assembly met yesterday. "Within a few days' time," Secretary Marshall said on Sunday, "the United States delegation will be making a number of proposals to the General Assembly which we believe will help to resolve some of the issues which are now disturbing good relations among nations." One of those proposals is likely to include some means of easing the U. N.'s veto-inflicted paralysis. It is by no means improbable that the most important step in international organization since the U. N. was created at San Francisco is about to be taken.

The necessity for some additional buttressing of the United Nations was heavily underscored again on Monday when the Soviet representative, Andrei A. Gromyko, double vetoed the American proposal to shift the Greek problem to the General Assembly without having it dropped from the Security Council agenda. First, the Soviet spokesman ruled by one vote against four that this obviously procedural question was not a procedural question. Then he vetoed the proposal itself. Herschel V. Johnson, the United States representative, conceded that Mr. Gromyko was within his technical rights. At the same time the Soviet has grossly violated the understanding among the Big Five at San Francisco to the effect that they were not expected to "use their 'veto' power willfully to obstruct the operation of the Council."

Russia has willfully obstructed the operations of the Council so many times as to make it virtually useless as an agency of collective security in the present state of world affairs. What can the United States do about it? Hope of eliminating the veto power seems to be nil since Russia can veto any proposed change in the U. N. Charter. But our Government has found a way, in dealing with numerous other postwar problems, to proceed without cooperation from Moscow when patience has been exhausted by Russian obstruction. Indeed, that policy has been repeatedly applied with considerable success. Joint administration of the American and British occupation zones in Germany was undertaken when Russia and France blocked all efforts to bring about the economic unification of all Germany. When Moscow turned thumbs down on the Marshall Plan, the nations of western Europe were encouraged to go ahead with a reconstruction program of their own in spite of Russia. Similarly in the case of Japan it has been found necessary to begin shaping the peace treaty without Russian participation. And work on an international control system for atomic power is in progress without the slightest hope of Russia's approval.

We think it is sound policy to extend this strategy into the operations of the United Nations. Already Secretary Marshall has transferred his interest and emphasis from the hamstrung Security Council to the General Assembly. But full reliance cannot be placed on the Assembly because its functions are investigatory and advisory. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, the editor of Foreign Affairs, has suggested the organization of a smaller nucleus within the United Nations to carry out its function of resisting armed attack in case its present machinery fails to function. Article 51 of the Charter reserves to U. N. members the specific right of collective self-defense against armed attack upon any one of them. That right was recently invoked in setting up the new security system for the Western Hemisphere at Rio de Janeiro. Similarly, the group of nations now working for reconstruction and peace in Europe could agree in a sort of protocol or "optional clause," as Mr. Armstrong points out, to carry out the Charter obligation of resisting armed attack. This would not only be consistent with the Charter; it would square with former Secretary of State Byrnes' offer of a 40-year defensive alliance to Russia, Great Britain and France, or to Britain and France without Russia.

Such an agreement to implement the Charter in the interest of common defense, in case the Security Council should fail to act, could be made operative by a two-thirds vote of the signatories. It would not undermine the U. N. because its whole purpose would be to uphold U. N. principles when Security Council action could not be obtained. It would not militate against any peaceful interests of Russia or any other nation because any nation could sign the protocol and thus secure the proposed additional guarantee of security.

Whether or not Secretary Marshall advances this idea, it will carry a very strong appeal. We cannot safely watch the crippling of the only peace machinery the world has without risking a new orgy of aggression in a confused and divided world. Political stability must be buttressed no less than economic stability. In our opinion, positive moves for both these purposes will have the support of the American people.

Stopgap Lending

John J. McCloy, president of the International Bank, and Camille Gutt, executive director of the International Monetary Fund, who are now in London attending the annual meeting of those organizations, told a press gathering that they were not in the "stopgap business." Heedless of this official warning against misuse of the resources of these two agencies to provide interim relief loans to Britain and other distressed countries, Hugh Dalton, Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer, has urged the Bank and the Fund to "consider all possible ways by which both the Bank and the Fund may make, within the next few months, an even larger contribution toward solving the urgent problems which confront us all, and toward helping to stave off the economic disasters which threaten so many of our members."

This appeal indicates that Mr. Dalton desires a liberalization of lending policies to provide precisely the kind of stopgap relief that neither the Bank nor the Fund is empowered to undertake. As a matter of fact, Mr. Dalton went on record last August in favor of a modification of Monetary Fund regulations to permit long-term borrowing from that agency—a proposal that would, as we pointed out at the time, wreck an exchange stabilization organization established to provide short-term credits for countries needing temporary assistance to meet deficits in their international balance of payments. The Fund would obviously be unable to render this kind of assistance in connection with currency stabilizing operations if its resources were tied up in long-term loans.

The International Bank is, to be sure, a long-term lending agency, but it, too, would be sunk if it were to employ its resources to finance relief programs. For the major portion of the Bank's loan funds will have to be obtained by sales of its debentures to private (predominantly American) investors. To retain the confidence of the investment community and achieve its purpose of stimulating a revival of private international investment, the Bank must restrict its operations to productive loans that are sound business risks—a point strongly emphasized in the second annual report of the Bank, made public last week.

Since Mr. Dalton is chairman of both the International Bank and the Monetary Fund, his irresponsible demands cannot be excused on the score of ignorance of the devastating effect of such proposals on the future usefulness of these two institutions. His recommendations are only desperate expedients to provide a limited amount of dollars to relieve Britain's present dearth. His disregard of the high price exacted for such temporary aid marks him as a politician of inferior rank looking for easy solutions of an economic problem calling for bold measures and revolutionary reforms.

Bird In Hand

Ford employes have been given a choice between two contracts, one offering a wage increase of 15 cents an hour in accordance with the national wage pattern, the other an increase of 7 cents per hour plus a pension plan that would, in conjunction with social security benefits, make generous provision for employes reaching the retirement age. More than 100,000 workers would be covered by this plan, which is unique not only because of its comprehensiveness but also because, for the first time in the history of collective bargaining, the employes have been afforded an opportunity to vote on the issue. President Thompson of Local 600 of the UAW with 65,000 members strongly urges acceptance of the pension plan. Its rejection, he declares, "might well set back by many years not only the Ford workers but the entire UAW-CIO in our efforts to obtain old-age security."

Only 540 votes have been cast for the pension proposal, however, in two of the 40 Ford locals that are polling their members, as compared with 6034 for straight wage increases. Thus it is virtually a foregone conclusion that the Ford workers will deny themselves the benefits of old-age annuities that, it is estimated, would cost the Ford company the equivalent of a wage increase of 14 cents per hour and provide pensions many times the size of those that employes could purchase with the individual contributions they would be required to make to the pension fund.

Such shortsightedness is deplorable, of course, but it is easy to understand the attitude of the employes, especially those in the younger age groups. The automobile industry, like other mass production industries, is subject to ups and downs. Workers having no security of tenure may well question whether they will hold their jobs long enough to qualify for pensions. Consequently, they prefer the bird in hand in the form of larger immediate wage increases instead of waiting to snare the game that may elude them. Then, too, the pension plan calls for contributions from the workers of 2½ per cent for the first $3000 of earnings and 5 per cent above that amount in addition to old-age contributions. With living costs steadily mounting, the average worker is reluctant to take on additional obligations. Moreover, our erratic price system causes a good many people to question the protective value of pensions payable in dollars of highly uncertain value in terms of goods.

While many of these objections to pensions as an alternative to higher wages have a certain validity, the arguments on the other side are much stronger. For a pension system can be adjusted if necessary to allow for long-time changes in price levels. And the establishment of such systems not only relieves aging workers of anxiety about the future but also makes their jobs more secure. For employers are more willing to retain competent older men in their employ if they can with a good conscience retire them when they cease to be useful. We conclude that the Ford employes will have cause to regret rejection of a proposal that would afford them a wonderful opportunity for building up security for themselves and their dependents in their old age.

Seeds of War

In The Washington Post of August 5 there was an article under the heading "Washington Calling" by Marquis Childs in which correct remarks were made about seeds of war, about sparks smouldering dangerously and menacingly in Greece and Indonesia. Very correct remarks, but is it true that the Dutch want to reinstate "colonialism" in Indonesia, as the writer contends?

No. What the Dutch want is to prevent a new and dangerous colonialism arising in Indonesia, i.e. colonialism of the "repoebliek" which is aiming at domination of the Great East, Borneo, the Sunda Islands, Madura and other peoples of the Archipelago by a small group or groups of potentates in Djogja in central Java A small group which shows more and more that it is going to be an implement of the most dangerous communism, the Muscovite.

The Great East, Borneo, the Sundanese, the Madurese and the other peoples out there do not want that domination. They are out for cooperation with the Netherlands. Growing groups, even in central Java, want that cooperation and would give evidence of it only if they need not fear Djogja's revenge and terrorism. If only they could be sure that the United Nations would support the Netherlands to restore order and authority, they, including those in Java, who live in fear of Djogja, would gladly back up the Hollanders to lead Indonesia along the road of modern democracy which the Netherlands started long ago.

Why do not the United Nations stand by the Netherlands in doing its duty? Why do they not support the Netherlands in its endeavors to destroy the most perilous seeds of war in Indonesia?

"Liberal" Law Danger

How can one have faith in any leader who advocates roseate legislation which any competent economist knows will eventually injure the country's business and its citizens? Thus certain U. S. leaders are proposing the passage of legislation such as the following: Expansion of Social Security (when there is no proof the present system is a success), Federal housing aid (which cannot compete with private industry), universal military training (which some military authorities deem unwise), Federal health bill (which would reduce the high standards of the American medical profession), etc. Far-reaching economic measures may be advocated by those whose principal economic experience may have been with the failure of a small business; universal military training may be urged by those lacking actual military experience; and foreign aid schemes may be proposed by those who never have lived or even traveled abroad.

I venture to say, that few, if any, of the advocates of important legislation soon to come before Congress, have analyzed its future results, its effect on the United States 25 years hence. And certainly the labor union leaders who are vociferously calling for "liberal" legislation either do not know or do not care how such laws might affect our national economy and the public welfare.

Three facts stand out: 1. That most of the "social" measures advocated are purely theoretical and experimental and never have succeeded in other countries on a long-range basis. 2. That socialism or communism never has been a success in any nation of free, independent men. 3. That, although American labor leaders seem to be aiming at obtaining control of the United States Government, promising thus to create a workingmen's Utopia, labor governments generally have failed, notably Blum's labor government which weakened France to become an easy victim of Germany, and the present British Labor government which is bungling Britain into collapse.

Religious Strife

Your cartoon of September 9 blandly attributes the age-old slaughter in India of neighbor by neighbor to "racial strife." This is not only incorrect but it also abets this type of fallacious factional propaganda. This strife, like similar strife between neighbors in other areas, is entirely of religious origin. All such situations first have to be correctly labeled before an approach to their solution can be achieved.

Even if the timidity with which we now approach such situations can be overcome we still will be faced with the almost unsurmountable problem of how to get those involved to intelligently re-examine the origins and also the present day values of the doctrines that so stir their emotions. W. J. K.

MacArthur's Example

Isn't it very strange we hear no clamor for billions from Gen. Douglas MacArthur for the atom-bombed Japanese people?

This taxpayer, for one, believes it might be very much to the point if our harassed State Department experts would consult with General MacArthur as to how to deal with the hysterical New Dealers in Europe, before sending good money after bad, since he has proved himself the most successful contemporary salvage operator on record.

European Clearing House

Congratulations for publishing on September 11 Mr. Nicholas Manticas' excellent letter calling for a European clearing house. He is so right.

To trade with one another, European nations require some form of international "hard" currency, at present only dollars or gold. Since they urgently need both of these to purchase goods from the United States, their own inter-European trade lags desperately. A European clearing house would provide the solution, and many economists have suggested it, including the late Lord Keynes. Keynes brought the plan to the Bretton Woods Conference with almost no advance publicity and it was lost in the shuffle. The American proposal for restoring the gold standard was instead accepted, a plan which is well-meaning but currently most impractical.

Let us have more thought on this subject. The European dollar shortage may be greatly alleviated and Mr. Bevin's cries for gold stilled. JOHN HULLEY.

Adequate Protection

A pamphlet by the Bureau of Employes Compensation of the Federal Security Agency was recently placed upon the desks of all employes in my office. Among other things this pamphlet contains the following:

"Q. If I am killed in line of duty?. A. Your family is adequately protected. . . . The maximum a widow can receive is $61.25 per month . . ."

It appears that some officials of the Federal Security Agency need drastic education in the definition of adequate protection on the basis of American standards of living.

Legislative Committees

I read only recently the interesting letter by Mr. Arthur J. Gang published in your newspaper on August 19. I wish to make it clear that in my letter of August 16 I was not incriminating "judicial legislation" as something fundamentally wrong which needs to be changed. On the contrary, I think that judicial legislation is to a certain extent an unavoidable feature of our system of government.

My point is that we need the possibility of a prompt legislative remedy in matters for which Congress establishes administrative laws. Most of these administrative laws interfere with and affect the economic fabric of the country. The more the Government, rightly or wrongly, intervenes in business and attempts to control some phases of it by means of an administrative law and body, the more it becomes vital to devise a means to remedy any unworkable or absurd decision reached by an administrative body, confirmed or not by judicial courts.

An administrative body is necessary in the administration of administrative law because the law is incapable of covering all cases which might come within its scope, whether so intended by Congress or not. In fact, therefore, Congress, in establishing administrative law, is delegating legislative powers to the administrative body. For such a delegation not to become, on one side, arbitrary, and on the other side, not to hamper the economic life of our country, it would be necessary:

1. Either for Congress to be omniscient when drafting the law, and provide the administrative body with clear-cut rules and standards applicable to all cases which might come under its jurisdiction. It is unthinkable that we shall reach such perfection in the drawing and writing of our administrative laws and besides, I consider it unfeasible because of the complexity of economic life.

2. Or, to intrust with this delegation a body of businessmen, labor representatives, and lawyers, with enough discretionary powers to provide rules applicable to specific cases. I think that this procedure is not to be recommended.

What happens for the time being is that administrative law is administered by lawyers, trained and accustomed to legalistic thinking, very often losing complete touch with the realities of the world in which we live. The portal-to-portal mess and the decision in the Packard foremen case, are typical illustrations of the danger to our economic system arising from narrow legalistic thinking in the administration of administrative law. Fortunately in these cases a prompt legislative remedy was possible because of the importance of the issue, which aroused public opinion and Congress.

But what kind of a remedy, prompt enough to be effective, has an industry in cases like the arbitrary and absurd (because unworkable) decision rendered by the Federal Trade Commission in its recent case against Elizabeth Arden concerning the use of demonstrators? There is no practical way of arousing the interest of either the public or of Congress in such matters. Therefore, if we leave the matters as they stand at present, an entire industry may suffer huge, irreparable damages before any legislative remedy can intervene.

It is my conviction, shared by many lawyers with whom I have discussed this matter, that the device of a permanent joint congressional committee, established in the case of the Taft-Hartley Act, is probably the solution to a difficult problem created by the intervention of Government in economic affairs. What we need is a permanent joint congressional committee for each administrative statute, such committee to be intrusted with the supervision of the operation of the law and with the prompt provision of legislative remedies whenever they prove necessary. Taking Stock Of the U. N.

By Malvina Lindsay

People's Capital

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Those hordes of plain people who all summer have come here to look over this embryo world capital, which they are trying to feel belongs to them, are increasing this week with the opening of another session of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

As they trudge through the labyrinth of low-ceilinged corridors of this former gyroscope plant, peer in conference rooms designated by bilingual signs, sit in auditoriums decorated with flags of many nations, one haunting question dogs their minds. It takes many forms, but it boils down to: What will come of all this?

So well have conflict and failure in the U. N. been advertised that few visitors have the glow of expectation many brought to earlier meetings of this world body. Today's atmosphere of anxiety and doubt is in contrast to the good will and hope prevalent last fall when the second General Assembly was welcomed so warmly and optimistically by President Truman.

YET THE PLACE does give many visitors an expanding horizon, a feeling they are reaching beyond American shores, even beyond themselves. Flags of 55 nations—the Stars and Stripes no larger, no less, than the others—circle a grass spot at the entrance. Inside, in halls, conference rooms, auditoriums, people of varying colors and costumes go about their business or huddle in committees. In cafeteria, restaurant, delegates' lounge, press rooms, there is a babble of tongues. Here at least barriers of race, creed, color are down.

Many students come and go, also club groups, curious sightseers, earnest internationalists who have often come far to see what they hope is the beginning of one world. Question these visitors and the gist of their answers is much the same; yes, it is all very interesting and—well they certainly hope it succeeds.

Unfortunately the average visitor has little idea of the unspectacular, solid achievement going on in many U. N. agencies while quarreling delegates get the headlines. He does not know that UNESCO has already done—even in such a small matter as getting pencils for school children in war ravaged countries. He doesn't know how the World Health organization is striving right now to protect him from another influenza epidemic, as well as to halt the spread of other diseases.

HE DOESN'T know that many a French family will eat this year because the World Food Agriculture Organization jumped into the breach last spring when French wheat was killed by frost and quickly re-allocated wheat shipments, then on the high seas, so French farmers could replant immediately. He doesn't realize that medicine and food are now being rushed to about four million hungry and sick children by the United Nations Children's Fund.

Above all, he doesn't recognize how in the many U. N. committees, agencies and office staffs thousands of the world's most intelligent and capable people, of different races, nationalities, traditions are getting kindergarten experience in working together, and in subordinating national loyalties to a wider loyalty in the world agency they serve.

However, many old hands in international work think it just as well that the U. N. is being viewed so anxiously by many of its citizens. For these workers are plagued by the question: Will this be another Geneva? They remember how people after the waning of their first enthusiasm for the League of Nations relaxed in naive and lazy faith leaving to it the future of the world while they tended their personal business.

Now general public concern about the U. N. is giving birth to a determination to sustain and strengthen it. And when word comes that Sauk Centre, Minn. the "Main Street" of Sinclair Lewis, will be the scene of a demonstration next month to that end, hope arises that in time peoples of the world may indeed make this their capital.

Efforts Rewarded

A newspaper has a peculiar responsibility to the public and I believe the public should hasten to commend it for a service rendered and not be only a source of criticism.

I am referring to the incident of the orphan at Gallinger Hospital whose condition was so serious that he needed a private nurse for a chance to live and whose story appeared in The Washington Post of September 12 and 13. I wish especially to note the services of your Mr. Jordan who showed unusual energy and skill in contacting several agencies and coordinating their efforts to help this unfortunate boy.

It should further be noted for the record, regardless of other publicity, that it was the St. Vincent de Paul Society who provided the money to pay for the services of the nurse.

If this boy gets back on his feet, it will be a magnificent reward for all who helped.

British Appreciation

I am an English visitor, and feel bound to write you expressing my appreciation for the American people. To me it is heaven to go shopping and buy a new dress and and pair of stockings without having to worry about coupons. Also your food is so wonderful. All Americans should thank God for America and never take her for granted.

Calling Washington

American Progress In Greece

ATHENS, GREECE—With all Europe reeling toward the gravest economic crisis, this extreme eastern projection of the tragic continent may be lost sight of. The fact remains, however, that it is here in this trouble center and here alone that the U. S. A. is committed to direct intervention.

Childs

How are we doing in Greece? The answer must be: not too well. But given the circumstances, this should surprise no one.

First and most important is the time element. The program the American aid mission is now attempting to carry out is based on information supplied last December and January. Since then conditions inside Greece have greatly deteriorated. The guerillas in the hills are expanding the area they control, and the economic condition has worsened.

ON TOP of the delay of nearly six months in sending the aid mission with relief, there came another delay. This was a delay of nearly two months after the arrival of Mission Director Dwight Griswold in moving to broaden the base of the Greek government. Stubborn leaders of the Populist Party on the extreme right were unwilling to share power with the Liberal Party. Griswold's determination, plus the visit of Loy Henderson from the State Department in Washington, finally forced the issue. But for a fortnight in the crisis, Greece had no valid government. A mystery to everyone here is why the Communists in the north did not exploit the situation and announce a free government in their area.

Now, for a week Greece has had a coalition government of the two major parties under the premiership of Themistocles Souphoulis. It is not merely as though the Democrats and Republicans in the United States were to form a joint government. The cleavage is deeper, since the two major Greek parties disagree fundamentally on the form of government. The Liberals, with a base in deep republican tradition, are opposed to a monarchy. The Populist Party favors a monarchy and runs from conservative to extreme reactionary. Whether this odd team can pull together remains to be seen.

THE REAL question is whether the honest amnesty offered by 86-year-old Souphoulis will persuade the rebels to surrender their arms and come out of the hills. Souphoulis' reputation for integrity and republicanism is counted on to attract thousands not irrevocably committed to communism.

Most Americans with a long background in Greece are skeptical of the outcome. So are Greeks of genuine democratic persuasion who believe that the former government alienated people by the arrest and exile of thousands who were not Communists at all but republicans with a hatred of oppression and the symbols of oppression.

On the other hand, Archbishop Damaskinos, perhaps the wisest man in the country, is enormously heartened by the coalition which, behind the scenes, he helped to shape. Damaskinos, who was regent following the revolution of 1944, is one of the most extraordinary figures of our time. He glows with hope at the prospect of peace from the new government.

A straw in the wind is the offer of the rebels on the island of Crete to surrender under the terms of the amnesty. It is recognized, however, that the Cretan rebels are a less fierce breed than those in Macedonia.

A potent fact is that the whole budget of the American mission is being recast, with the probability that the military will get a greater share than originally contemplated. This seems a clear sign of an intention to concentrate on a more efficient and possibly even a larger army. Certainly security is the first essential. But whether it can be obtained with the present Greek army is doubtful.

The army of 138,000 is so organized that only 30,000 to 40,000 can be deployed against the guerillas at any one time. The training of the army by the British in the old tradition introduced rigidities and formalities that are a handicap in mountain warfare.

There are still several thousand British troops in Greece, most of them around Salonika. Greeks in Athens tremble at the prospect of their removal. They believe it would mean immediate intensification of material and possibly even troops from across the border.

Americans I have talked to here hope the British troops can be kept on. Yet Griswold has recommended that an American occupation force come in if the British, in an economy move, do pull their troops out.

There should be no illusions about the difficulties an American force would meet. The northern border is 700 miles in length, through wild, mountainous country. The pressure would be great to get the Americans to seal this border as essential to the security of the nation.

These are the grim realities of our uncomfortable position on the razor's edge at a point where East and West meet.

Greeks Want Any Government Providing Work and Peace

By M. W. Fodor
Post Reporter

Salonika, Macedonia, Sept. 16 (By Cable).—"Any government that will give us work and peace is our government."

This is the expression, in one form or other, that one hears on all sides here in the powder keg of Greece—from Republicans and Royalist Populists alike.

I have visited 14 cities and villages in Macedonia to get the reaction of the people to the new Sophoulis-Tsaldaris government.

The Tension Eases

Everywhere there is hope and relaxation of tension.

Will the rebels come down out of the mountains and accept the Sophoulis offer of amnesty?

No one knows for sure, but certainly all factions here in Salonika hope they will.

For the refugee problem here in northern Greece is terrific — an estimated 200,000 people, forced out of their villages by rebel raids are a great tax on Salonika and other cities.

They have to be fed—and there is little bread. They have to be housed, and there is no surplus housing. Getting these people back to their own homes will remove one of the great problems. Sophoulis is pressing for a quick solution of the civil war problem as Greece's No. 1 difficulty. If the rebels accept his terms and refugees can return home and the people in island concentration camps can be released, Greece will be on the way back.

Black Market Abates

There are many manifestations of the confidence in Sophoulis here in Salonika. Black market quotations on the gold pound fell from 165,000 to 140,000 drachmae here last week. People are talking freely, whereas on my last visit only six weeks ago everyone had a tight lip. Farmers are talking about the possibilities of getting fertilizer for next year's crops. A few weeks ago they were talking revolution. They are encouraging refugees to go home.

Even in Vassilika, a stanch Royalist stronghold, there was rejoicing and wishes for the success of the new government.

Dimitrios Partsikes, president of the Macedonian Cooperatives in Vassilika warned that the new government must concentrate on the farmers.

"Out of the first loan which came to Greece, 520 billion drachmae went to manufacturers and only 180 billion to farmers," he said. "We represent 75 per cent of the population."

There can be no doubt that the Communist Party has received a body blow by the widespread acclaim of the coalition. Even the Communist press seems discouraged.

Arosemena Named To Lead Ecuador

Quito, Ecuador, Sept. 16 (AP).—The Ecuadorean congress today elected a 53-year-old philanthropist and banker, Carlos Julio Arosemena, as vice president and the man slated to assume the presidency for the interim period ending September 1, 1948.

Arosemena, a newcomer in politics, will be Ecuador's fourth chief executive in less than a month. He won 103 votes of the joint senate-house total of 107.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Kremlin's New Line

ROME, Sept. 16.—This unreal political landscape resembles nothing so much as a hillside still brightly flecked with sunshine in the instant before a great storm darkly descends. The light is deceptive, and conclusions must be tentative. Yet it is certainly worth noting the clear probability that the Kremlin has now altered the directive of the western European Communist Parties. After more than two years of half measures, an immediate offensive in full force seems to have been commanded.

It is appropriate that the first signs of this great event should become visible here in Italy. For it was also here in Italy that the western European Communist line was established for the immediate postwar period. The story is dramatic.

VERY BRIEFLY, the Communist groups of Italian partisans were early organized by veterans of the international brigade in Spain sent out from Moscow. Their main task, moreover, was not to fight the Italian Fascists and German Nazis, but to prepare for a seizure of power on the classical revolutionary pattern in the expected chaos of Fascist Italy's defeat. Most of their energy was therefore employed in attacking possible future competitors.

Then the surrender of Marshal Badoglio led to the establishment of the pro-Ally co-belligerent Italian government in southern Italy. The Italian Communists instantly denounced it as a set of Fascists in fancy dress; set up a great outcry against the King's remaining in Italy, and roundly vowed their perpetual opposition.

At this juncture there arrived in Italy from Moscow none other than Palmiro Togliatti, western Europe's most eminent wearer of the Comintern old school tie. In 24 hours he made it clear that the Italian comrades on the spot, lacking the benefit of his higher education, had been misreading the holy books. The presence of the King, and the company of Fascists in fancy dress, equally ceased to be obstacles. The Communists, headed by Togliatti, entered the government at once. This set the pattern for western Europe as a whole.

It is now obvious that behind this deeply significant event there was an extremely hard-headed decision by the Kremlin. This decision may be outlined as follows.

FIRST, in eastern Europe, a gigantic, monolithic power center was to be organized, composed of the Soviet Union and its surrounding satellites. Here, of course, Soviet rule was to be absolute. Second, however, a more cautious policy was to be followed in western Europe. The Communists were not to seek full power. They were merely to infiltrate the various western European governments, and to remain within those governments by hook or by crook, especially the latter.

This explains the many puzzling features of French and Italian Communist postwar policy—the emphasis on cooperation for national reconstruction; the highly un-Marxist nationalism suddenly flaunted; Togliatti's odd benison on the Lateran Pact in Italy; and so forth. Remaining within the governments was the prime mission, to which every Marxist commandment was boldly sacrificed.

This in turn had two purposes. From within the western European governments, the Communists were to prevent any opposition to Soviet foreign policy. And they were also to maintain a general condition of political disorganization and governmental feebleness which would, at length, reduce the western European states to the semblance of a mere heap of iron filings. Then, the great power center in eastern Europe, having been triumphantly completed, was to become a magnet irresistibly attracting the iron filings to itself.

In planning this shrewd strategy, the Kremlin omitted two essential factors. Even the French and Italians, the worst war sufferers in western Europe, retained unexpected vigor and independence. And this vigor and independence was also unexpectedly stimulated by the clumsy but determined opposition of the United States to the Soviets. At length the whole strategy was defeated when Premier de Gasperi expelled the Communists from office in Italy and Premier Ramadier kept them out in France. Worse still, the United States announced the Marshall Plan. This held out the shocking danger that instead of remaining disorganized, western Europe might regain strength and health—might even, perish the thought, begin to exercise an attraction of its own for the Soviet satellites.

For the present, none the less, there is still disorganization; there is still hunger; there is still little hope in western Europe. The United States, which can restore stability and hopefulness, is slow and ungainly as usual. The Kremlin's opportunity is now. Hence the present change in the party line. Cooperation in national reconstruction is at an end. Instead, the Communist Party's power in the labor movement is being used for great political strikes like those in northern Italy. Hesitation is at end also. The Communists are taking the offensive. If the paralysis of American policy affords the chance, the western European Communist Parties will now try to seize what they did not before desire—full power and full responsibility. That is something for the Washington policy makers to mull over rather prayerfully.

The Gallup Poll

Nearly 3 Out of 4 Voters Feel U. S.-Soviet Split Hurts U. N.

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 16.—An overwhelming majority of Americans polled by the institute think the split between Russia and the United States is hurting the United Nations.

The veto power, source of friction and bitter controversy in the U. N. should be done away with, in the opinion of the largest number of voters familiar with the veto issue.

Those facts are revealed in a deep and extensive probing of American public attitudes toward the U. N. Twenty-two questions were put to voters from coast to coast in what is believed to be the most comprehensive survey ever conducted on American attitudes toward the U. N. Some of the results already have been reported.

There is a good deal of fear throughout the Nation that Russia will leave the U. N. American voters do not look upon such a possibility with indifference.

Attitudes toward Russia's relations with the U. N. and toward the veto power were probed as follows:

Do you think the split between Russia and the United States will affect the U. N.—that is, will help it, hurt it, or will it make no difference?

Help	6%
Hurt	72
No difference	16
No opinion	6

Do you think that Russia will leave the United Nations?

Yes	42%
No	34
Qualified answer	5
No opinion	19

What is meant by the veto power in the U. N. organization?

A total of 57 per cent gave a reasonably correct definition, while 43 per cent said they did not know.

(The veto power, a privilege exercised by the members of the Security Council only, is the power to block action by a negative vote. On all matters other than procedure there must be unanimous vote of the big five permanent members—the United States, Russia, China, France and England. Hence one opposing vote alone among the big five may prevent action.

Should the veto power be done away with?

Yes	30%
No	19
No opinion	8
Don't know what veto power is	43

During the first year of the U. N.'s existence there was undoubtedly confusion in the public mind over the peace functions of the U. N., with many mistakenly believing that the U. N. is supposed to write the final peace between victors and vanquished of World War II.

Is it your understanding that the U. N. is supposed to write the final peace between Germany and the Allied Nations or is this peace to be written by the leaders of these nations?

N. N. to write peace	33%
Leaders to write	53
No opinion	14

U. N. officials some time ago proposed that the working population of the world donate one day's pay to the U. N. to help the underfed and underprivileged children of the world.

This idea seems to have considerable appeal to the American public, as the following shows:

The U. N. has suggested that all employed people throughout the world give one day's pay to the U. N. to help the underfed children of the world. Do you approve or disapprove of this suggestion?

Approve	74%
Disapprove	23
No opinion	3

Would you or your husband be willing to give one day's pay to this cause?

Yes	74%
No	19
No opinion	7

However, the extent of cooperation on the part of the public would depend a great deal on how effectively the appeal was made, how efficiently a system of collection was set up, and how prosperous people happened to feel at the time in the face of the rising cost of living.

Other important findings of the survey already reported were as follows:

Enlistment Drop Alarming To Army and Navy Chiefs

By International News Service

Army and Navy spokesmen revealed yesterday that recruiting is falling alarmingly short of maintaining postwar strength, already cut to 1,300,000 men.

Rear Admiral Thomas L. Sprague, chief of Navy personnel, reported that August recruitment dropped 22 per cent below the 15,000 enlistments needed to reach congressionally authorized strength of 395,000.

A War Department spokesman said the recruiting rate reported a few days ago by General Eisenhower as 33 per cent below requirements has not changed.

The Army needs 30,000 enlistments a month for its authorized complement of 950,000 men. The chief of staff announced the need was not being met "by 8000 or 10,000."

Sprague declared "the situation is not rosy," despite an unexpected high Navy reenlistment rate in August of 48 per cent of discharges.

Reenlistments are valuable, Sprague explained, because these men do not need the six-months training that new sailors must have before they can contribute to the Navy's actual effectiveness.

The admiral said enlistment is suffering because of high wages currently being paid by private enterprise. He added:

"The Navy becomes more attractive financially when wages are low. Opportunities in civil life today are very attractive to young men."

Sprague indicated the thinness of the defensive ice by pointing out that if the 180,000 enlistment goal for the fiscal year ending June 30 is achieved, the fleet could be kept at authorized peacetime strength only.

But, he warned, if "we need ships at full wartime strength to maintain our commitments in the Mediterranean or the Far East," many other ships could not be adequately manned.

If the recruiting effort continues to fall short, he said, this situation would be worsened by at least 10 per cent.

Eisenhower declared it was up to the American people to keep the Army up to strength. He added:

"If the strength of the Army falls dangerously low, then all I can do is to lay the facts before Congress."

Several Guerilla Leaders Set To Halt War, Sophoulis Says

Athens, Greece, Sept. 16 (U.P.)—Premier Themistocles Sophoulis announced today he had received letters from several guerilla leaders stating they were ready to lay down their arms, but fighting in the north reportedly increased in tempo.

Press dispatches said one guerilla force infiltrated into the center of Larissa, while another machinegunned guards at Salonika before it was driven off by tanks and cilivian defense corps.

Greek planes dropped thousands of leaflets over guerilla territory, advising leftists of the government's amnesty order, but the Greek army continued its offensive in the Kaimtsalan area and guerilla bands raided several Greek towns along the Yugoslav border.

Dwight Griswold, head of the American aid mission to Athens, commenting on reported Greek requests for increased economic and military aid, said there had been no discussion yet with the Greek government. He added, however, that it would not be possible to increase both military and economic assistance at the same time.

Griswold said he planned to fly to Turkey Friday with George C, McGhee, State Department coordinator, who expects to remain in Ankara several days to inspect the American aid program.

U. S., Denmark Review Greenland Base Pact

The State Department said yesterday that "informal exploratory talks" had been in progress with Denmark since last May with regard to modifying or canceling a wartime defense agreement permitting bases in Greenland.

Michael J. McDermott, the department's press officer, told a news conference he could say nothing about progress of the discussins, which he described as "still exploratory" in nature.

While Denmark formally proposed cancellation, the United States preferred revision.

Tucker Board Head Resigns, Hits Funds' Use

Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 16 (AP).—Col. H. A. Toulmin, jr., Dayton patent attorney, today resigned as chairman of the board of the Tucker Corp., Chicago. He sent his resignation to the Securities and Exchange Commission in Philadelphia.

Toulmin

Colonel Toulmin said in his letter of resignation that Preston Tucker, company president, had disregarded his demands about the proper expenditure of money that had been obtained through sale of stock in the automobile company.

His letter said:

"Have resigned this morning from the chairmanship of the board of the Tucker Corp., Chicago, because Preston Tucker would not agree to my written demands of the last two months that any money raised from the public should be spent and administered under the strictest regulations and controls normal to legitimate business.

"My position was that public funds are a public interest and must be administered for the public benefit and not in the arbitrary opinion and whims of any individual without proper corporate authority and control."

Tucker said he had telephoned Toulmin early today and asked him to resign as chairman of the corporation to make way for "a prominent man now active in the automobile industry."

Tucker said the new chairman's name would be announced within a few days.

Regarding Toulmin's statement of the spending of public money derived from stock sales, Tucker said "not a dime" of this money had been spent. Issuance of the stock closed Friday.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 16 (AP).—Grain futures prices slumped today on an early selling wave which trade sources said was prompted partly at least by a Government request that major grain markets practically double margin requirements on speculative grain transactions.

Wheat dropped more than 7 cents a bushel at times, corn more than 6 cents and oats as much as 6 cents, at the Chicago Board of Trade.

A late rally was occasioned partly by a statement by J. O. McClintock, president of the Board of Trade that action on the Government's request would be postponed until later in the week because several directors were out of town attending a convention.

Wheat closed ⅝ to 3½ cents lower than the previous finish, September 2.77½@2.78; corn was off 2 to 2¾ cents, September 2.63@2.63¾, and oats were down ⅛ to 2⅝ cents, September 1.20½@1.20¾. November soybeans closed at 3.42, up 2¾ cents.

J. M. Mehl, administrator of the Commodity Exchange Authority, in a telegram to Board of Trade officials from Washington asked that margin requirements be boosted to 33⅓ per cent to "lessen the danger of a boom and bust situation" in the grain markets.

Minimum margin requirements now are 45 cents for wheat and corn, 25 cents for oats, 30 cents for barley, and 75 cents for soybeans. At market values at the start of trading today, this was about 16 to 18 per cent for wheat and 17 to 19 per cent for corn.

C. M. Galvin, market authority for James E. Bennett & Co., said this request caused some early liquidation of large accounts on the theory that if margin requirements were practically doubled, it would decrease purchasing power and might make it difficult for holders of large accounts to find buyers when they desire to liquidate later.

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—Cotton futures were strong during the entire session today with the exception of the last three minutes, when an avalanche of selling orders came into the ring. Final prices were 1.85 to 2.83 a bale higher.

Trade and commission house buyers were forced to advance their buying limits during the session as there was a scarcity of contracts. Most of the selling was attributed to the fact that hedge pressure so far this season has been light.

Producers were said to be holding their cotton for higher prices and in the event they were in need of funds they would obtain bank loans.

Freedom isn't Free!

A Railroad Salutes the Freedom Train Which Starts Its National Tour in Philadelphia This Week

THIS week the whistles will blow and the church bells will ring in Philadelphia. For there, where our Constitution was born, the most remarkable railroad train in history is beginning a national tour — a train transformed into a rolling shrine to display the great documents on which our American freedoms are based.

As the school children of Philadelphia (and the 300 other cities to come) gaze on Jefferson's own draft of the Declaration of Independence, or the official manuscript of the Bill of Rights, or Lincoln's pen notes for the Gettysburg address, sober thoughts will run through the minds of their elders.

FREEDOM, as world events have taught us, isn't free like the air we breathe. It isn't from everlasting to everlasting. It was won by bitter struggle, and it can be lost with tragic ease, if we Americans take it for granted.

The lesson of our time is that freedom must be earned, in each generation, by our integrity and ability as citizens. Either we continue to earn it, or we shall wake up some morning to find that it has slipped through our fingers, as it slipped through the hands of so many other people in the world. A dictatorship will have taken it from us.

IN our business hours many Americans speak of "Free Enterprise" as though it were a God-bestowed blessing. Some are surprised to find that it isn't listed in the Declaration of Independence under Mr. Jefferson's "unalienable rights."

But freedom of enterprise, like our political liberties, doesn't blow like the wind from Heaven. It must be earned. Either business, in serving itself, serves the public, or it invites strangling regulation.

It can almost be said that the measure of our success as a republic is the amount of regulation we can get along without. Judged by this standard, we have a long way to go. Does anyone believe that either the Securities Exchange Act or the Taft-Hartley Labor Bill is a tribute to our success in self-discipline?

THE duty of the business man and the labor leader in our community is to make our economic freedoms work. This is a duty they have to the whole public, not merely to their own group or class. It is far better that these men should disclose and assail the wrongs in our system than that they should see, hear and speak no evil. Either we do our own housekeeping or an indignant electorate will do it for us.

What would have happened in the twenties, for example, if a few determined men in Wall Street had publicly denounced the iniquities then practised in the name of the Bull Market? Such an action would have broken all the rules of the Club, but the crash and the depression would have been easier, and business would have escaped a whole morass of legislation.

And what restrictions could the labor movement have avoided if some audacious leader had insisted that his union be accountable to the laws and customs of contracts?

It is taking us a long time to learn that, when we invite the devil to take the hindmost, the devil may take us all.

IN the words of Tom Paine: "Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must bear the fatigues of supporting it."

There can be no liberty that isn't earned.

That, to us, is the import of the Freedom Train. And the Chesapeake & Ohio, which is one of many railroads over whose tracks this national shrine will pass, salutes it on the start of its historic mission. We will guard it well when it comes our way. May it have a fruitful journey!

Apartment Rent Hike Granted

The District Rent Control Administration yesterday granted 8 per cent boosts for 128 Maryland Courts apartment units at 518 9th st. ne., and 815 E st. ne.

Apartments previously renting for $30 per month will go up to $32.50; those formerly costing $62.50 to $67.50 a month.

Examiner James G. Tyson recommended the hike after considering testimony taken at a public hearing. He estimated the increase would bring the owner, L. S. Asher, $5100 more income per year. Asher had sought 12 per cent boosts to bring in $8448 more a year.

The rent boost was needed to cover higher taxes and water rents and mounting maintenance costs, Asher said.

Tenants have 10 days in which to apply for reconsideration by Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell.

Cross-County Bus Proposal Given Setback

Two nearby Virginia bus companies yesterday threw cold water on an Arlington Public Utilities Commission proposal for cross-county bus service.

Arnold Bus Co. General Manager H. H. England said his firm already is providing such service along Glebe rd. in Arlington, and has found the route "poorly patronized."

But PUC Transportation Committee Chairman Lester R. Conley denied that the Arnold Glebe rd. route is "cross-county service in any way, shape or form."

He called it merely a new Arnold route linking Fairlington with Clarendon. Under terms of the merger between the Arnold and Arlington-Fairfax lines, the Arnold Co. was directed to establish cross-county service.

England also expressed little enthusiasm for a PUC "free transfer" proposal, which would make possible a change from Arnold to A. B. & W. buses without payment of an additional fare.

An A. B. & W. spokesman said his company also opposed any free transfers and had "no plans as of this moment" for cross-county routes linking its buses with Arnold facilities.

According to England, Arnold's Glebe rd. route had been a failure since its inception and certain unspecified "changes" would have to be made on it. Already the company has discontinued its Sunday service along Glebe rd. with "no complaints from riders," England pointed out.

Conley said the PUC hoped to hold a meeting with both bus companies within the next few days to see what plans for cross-county operation they may have formulated and to study the transfer problem.

"It is the position of the PUC," he said, "that both lines could coordinate certain of their schedules without increasing the number of buses so as to afford a mutual cross-county service."

New Restaurant Chain Chartered

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 16.—The State corporation commission has granted a charter to Travelers Restaurant Inc., of Fredericksburg, giving authority to operate a chain of roadside restaurants. Felix Soret, Virginia and Florida restaurateur, is named as president; Waldo H. Beck, vice president; Charles J. Beck, secretary, and Mrs. Mildred Soret, treasurer. All except Soret are permanent residents of Fredericksburg.

The company, which is capitalized at $50,000, has opened its first restaurant at Falmouth on Route 1, a mile north of Fredericksburg.

Barn Destroyed

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 16.—A barn on the L. E. Cloud farm near Marlowe, north of here, was destroyed by fire last night, with its contents, including 60 tons of hay, $1500 worth of wheat and a considerable amount of machinery and equipment. The fire department here and that from Williamsport, Md., tried to control the blaze. Origin of the fire was not determined.

Words for Congressmen to Eat

By Drew Pearson

Words certain statesmen would like to forget (made during the OPA debates one year ago):

Wherry

Senator Kenneth Wherry, Nebraska Republican—"Taft! Taft! Everybody's always talking about what Taft has done to OPA. I'm the fellow that knocked out meat control, and I've done more to that bill than anybody else."

Representative John Taber, New York Republican—"OPA is at the present time the chief promoter of inflation."

Senator Robert Taft, Ohio Republican—"Prices somewhat higher than normal tend to increase production. We certainly should not force such a reduction of prices as to interfere with more production."

Representative Reid F. Murray, Wisconsin Republican—"I do not care to vote for any more money for the OPA and thus increase the dangers of starvation . . . Chester Bowles and the other agencies are there to keep businessmen from making a profit."

Representative Henry D. Larcade, jr., Louisiana Democrat—"(OPA) was run in a high-handed, dictatorial and discriminating manner, treating not only the members of Congress but the people of the country as a whole with disdain, disrespect and discourtesy."

Representative Chase Woodhouse, Connecticut Democrat—"Let us have the courage to face a few more months of orderly decontrol as the price of economic stability and peace."

Representative Jessie Sumner, Illinois Republican—"Subsidies are just OPA's black-market way of concealing the fact the cost of living is going up and up and your money is buying less and less and less."

Representative William Lemke, North Dakota Republican—"Today the question is should the OPA be liquidated—abolished? My answer is that it should never have been created. It is an un-American, illegitimate child. It was born of foreign parentage."

Representative Carl T. Curtis, Nebraska Republican—"(OPA) is a sham and a fraud. It is one of the prime causes of inflation."

Representative Edward O. McCowen, Ohio Republican—"Let us make the break now, and then let the price-control act die its natural death. There will be confusion for a few months . . . then confusion will end, prices will be stabilized and production will be normal and sufficient."

Supreme Court Sanctity

Most sacred spot in all Washington is the inner sanctum of the Supreme Court. This is where the justices work out their opinions, and no one except the black-robed nine and a few court functionaries enter. Almost equally exclusive is the room just outside the Supreme Court conference chamber. Fewer people enter here than the office of the President of the United States.

One person who never worries about Supreme Court sanctity, however, is vivacious Miss "Jojo" Black, 15-year-old daughter of Justice Hugo Black. Like her father, Jojo believes in getting things done.

Once, during a highly exclusive Supreme Court conference, Justice Black got a telephone call from his home. Ordinarily calls are not put through to Supreme Court members while they are in conference. But this was important. Delightful daughter Jojo wanted to tell her daddy that she needed a carpenter to fix her closet door. And later, the justice found Jojo sitting just outside the conference room, where nobody else sits, waiting for him to tend to her much more important problems.

In The Lion's Mouth

Industrialist Henry Kaiser put his head in a lion's mouth the other day, wound up having the lion thank him for the experience.

The lion in this case was Pennsylvania's crusty GOP Congressman Robert Rich, who rises during almost every House appropriations debate to chant, "Where are we going to get the money?"

Last week Rich publicly warned he would demand a complete investigation of the RFC if it scaled down some 35 million dollars of wartime costs owed it by Kaiser for building the Fontana steel plant in California.

Burned up at Rich's charge, Kaiser appeared, uninvited, next day at a meeting of the investigating committee of which Rich is a member. Storming into the meeting, Kaiser demanded an immediate probe of himself and the RFC.

Not many people ask for congressional investigations, but Kaiser did—and got it—thanks to fair-minded Chairman Bender of Ohio.

The White-Haired Steel Co.

When it opened, Kaiser asked chief critic Rich if he knew how much the Government had lost on war plants built for U. S. Steel.

"No," replied the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

"Well," said Kaiser, "the Government lost more than 300 million dollars in surplus deals with U. S. Steel and I don't hear a lot of Congressmen threatening to investigate that."

"On the Geneva, Utah, plant," he continued, "the Government took a loss of more than 151 million dollars. They sold it to U. S. Steel for exactly 20 cents on the dollar. Then you say we at Fontana have to pay up 100 cents on the dollar. That means the extra debt burden Fontana pays adds 16 dollars a ton to the price of steel we charge our customers. We don't want to gouge our customers to pay back the RFC. The Government wants lower prices, yet the Government forces us to charge high prices."

"But Mr. Kaiser," interrupted Virginia's Democratic Congressman Porter Hardy, "if the Government forgives you these excessive wartime construction costs, won't that mean they'll have to do the same for every other firm that has a war-built plant?"

"No, it doesn't," Kaiser replied, "the only other possible company in the same position is Reynolds Metals."

Kaiser also pointed out that the Government took a loss of more than sixty million dollars on three surplus plants sold to U. S. Steel in Homestead, Duquesne and Braddock, Pa.

As the hearing closed, Doubting Thomas Rich finally seemed satisfied.

Merry-Go-Round

The Air Forces is keeping it quiet for the sake of the other services but it has been snowed under with applications from former Army, Navy and Marine officers—begging for enlisted status in the Air Corps. More than 24,000 applications have poured into recruiting offices from ranks as high as Navy captain and Army colonel. Those who can meet the Air Corps' tough standards are assigned new ranks, ranging from corporal to master sergeant . . . Although enlistments are booming under the impetus of a vigorous recruiting drive, the Air Corps is still short 67,000 enlisted men.

Daughter's Charge Holds Va. Man

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 16 (AP).—Anthony Soddu, 62, of nearby Woodlawn, was indicted this afternoon by a grand jury in Prince George Circuit Court on a charge of raping his 17-year-old daughter.

Date for trial of the case will be set later and the defendant is being held in default of $5000 bond. Police said the attack occurred last May while the girl's mother was in the hospital having her fourth child.

According to police the daughter kept silent about the alleged attack because of her father's threats. Later she was married and still later made a complaint to authorities. Soddu disappeared, but subsequently was arrested in New York.

Norfolk Man Freed Of Robbery Charge

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 16 (AP).—Clifton A. Sanders, 48, who a week ago was charged with participating in the $12,065 robbery of a grocery store manager, was dismissed in Police Court today on motion of Captain of Detectives H. L. Dickens.

Dickens informed Justice Leonard H. Davis the detective bureau had been unable to have an important witness brought here from North Carolina and therefore he asked the charges be dismissed.

No Turkeys for Britons

London, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Food Minister John Strachey said today that Britain, as an austerity measure would stop buying American turkeys, even at Christmas.

One on the Aisle—

'Lady Windermere' or A Lost World Comes to Life

By Richard L. Coe

(Reprinted from yesterday's final edition)

A LOST WORLD was affectionately recreated last night on the stage of the National, where Cecil Beaton's sumptuously designed "Lady Windermere's Fan" opened a three-week run.

So lovingly and elegantly is this 55-year-old play decked out in furbelows and satins that an incident on the other side of the footlights quite startled this observer.

We noticed a lady of our acquaintance in the audience who had recently returned from England and went over to chat with her. On her dress she was wearing an insignia we had seen only once before—the Order of the Garter. We were about to congratulate her on so signal an honor for so short a visit when we were informed she had picked it up in a second hand shop and was wearing it as a souvenir.

Not only would her late, gracious majesty, Victoria, have been shocked but Oscar Wilde, who so successfully startled the Victorians with "Lady Windermere," would have been scandalized. For while he mocked society through his characters, Society with the capital S was his great passion.

Watching this comedy of manners then, in an audience boasting the Order of the Garter picked up as a souvenir, is like finding a group of prehistoric men in a glacier. The customs which made Wilde's play possible and the elegant manners, speech and dress of his characters are of a world, a very small world, now gone with the wind.

The vitality of this production—as it is of Wilde's wit—is its elegance. Of the National's recent offerings, only the stunning beauty of "Lute Song" compares with the visual delights of this, but that was beauty of another sort.

Cecil Beaton's Skill

In this offering, the demanding, versatile Cecil Beaton has been permitted by his trio of producers to go, in an inappropriate phrase, hog wild. His settings are a feast of color, satin walls, antique furnishings and flowers everywhere. His costumes are a mass of flowing materials, his ladies appearing for each scene in gowns that provoke ohs and ahs from knowing ladies in the audience. As a recreation of a tiny, but vastly influential world, this is a stunning production.

The story of a mother who ran away from her husband and came back for a look at her daughter only to keep her from doing the same thing is inevitably quaint in such an outspoken day as ours. It was an endlessly fascinating and familiar one to our grandparents, though. Some 25 years ago Somerset Maugham tried a variation of the theme in "The Circle," but if you've seen this one lately, you'll know that even his switch in ending can't keep the melodramatic aspect out of the plot.

Miss Winwood Scores

It is almost remarkable, then, to find that Cornelia Otis Skinner and her company manage not to provoke outright hoots at behavior Washington used to laugh at out in the Roadside revival days. Playwright Wilde, to be sure, helps with his scintillating conversation. They are bright lines, still and graceful to listen to, speech used as a brilliant descent over a familiar melody.

Though several principals were not in last season's New York engagement of the revival, you'll be pleased to know that everyone is completely capable of getting around gracefully in such stylish surroundings.

Miss Skinner, who in her monodrama days used to create so many memorable stage pictures, looks strikingly beautiful in her radiant yardage and, as Mrs. Erlynne should, is delightfully aware of her distinction.

For last night's audience—and because Wilde wrote his ageing gorgons so brilliantly—Estelle Winwood's Duchess of Berwick was closest to the heart. The easy cunning of the skilled Miss Winwood makes the Duchess' scenes sheer delight, foreshadowing the incomparably demented wisdom of "The Importance of Being Earnest." The Winwood voice, rambling around on all registers, is certainly one of the delights of "Lady Windermere."

Judith Fellows is making her first appearance in this country in the title role, a lovely peaches-and-cream complexioned girl who gives the stuffy character welcome warmth.

David Manners, Bramwell Fletcher and Rex Evans have the leading male roles, managing to make you accept them, though like all of Wilde's men they are as lifeless as puppets.

So there you are, a long gone world, caught up with exquisite tenderness and exhibited in a cage of spun glass, the like of which you'll rarely see again.

TOMORROW: Our summer theater's most successful season.

VAUGHN MONROE, who arrives tomorrow on the stage of the Capitol with his orchestra and the Moonmaids. The new bill's picture is "Repeat Performance," which might also title Monroe's F st. return. He's a mighty popular guy with the young 'uns

Off-Agin, On-Agin Chaplin

Charlie's Comedy Cops Five-Theater Opening

For some hectic hours yesterday, it didn't look as though "Monsieur Verdoux," the Charlie Chaplin comedy, would open here while the House Un-American Activities Committee meets on the hill during the last week of this month.

But rapid fire work on the part of United Artists and Russell Birdwell, Chaplin's widely publicized publicity man, pulled the dramatic date out of the fire for Charlie.

Now "Monsieur Verdoux" will open September 26, simultaneously at the Pix Theater downtown and at four neighborhood theaters of the K-B chain, the Naylor, Senator, Apex and Atlas.

Originally the opening was set for the Capitol the preceding day.

The trouble all started when the gathering clan of United Artists bigwigs and Birdwell were getting together to set exploitation wheels in motion. The film played New York last spring and was withdrawn until fall, when a national campaign was worked out with Washington as the starting point.

The fact that the Un-American Activities Committee would be meeting at the same time and that the film comedian might possibly be called to testify before it naturally weighed heavily in the Birdwell advertising plans.

Grounds of Taste Questioned

Here Carter T. Barron, division manager of Loew's stepped in to the surprise of Birdwell and United Artists. Barron didn't think the idea of tieing in the opening of the picture with congressional activity was in good taste and said so.

"We have postponed the engagement," Barron stated, "When the booking was made there was no thought in our mind of linking the appearance of the picture at the Capitol with the possible appearance of Chaplin before the House Un-American Activities Committee. We wish to avoid any appearance of such intent and therefore have postponed the engagement.

What Barron said he specifically objected to was Chaplin's statement regarding the "coincidence" of the opening date. Chaplin had said:

"It is no ironical coincidence that my comedy opens in the Nation's capital less than 24 hours after Representative J. Parnell Thomas begins his probe into asserted communistic film activities. If I am to be called to Washington, there might just as well be a harbinger of my arrival. I have no better harbinger than my comedy, 'Monsieur Verdoux.'"

Chaplin was referring to the fact that for months Representative Thomas and others have threatened that he would be subpenaed for the hearing. So far he has not been called, although while Representative Thomas was in Hollywood last spring Chaplin let it be widely known he was willing to answer any questions the committee might have to make of him on his political beliefs.

"Kicking Hollywood Around"

Yesterday Chaplin's representatives were quick to claim that the star not only repeatedly had made himself available, but that this was one more instance of kicking Hollywood around to the advantage of politicians at the expense of the actors' colony.

Both United Artists and Birdwell also took strong exception to the manner in which the cancellation of the Capitol Theater date was made. Neither the New York nor the local office had been notified about the booking postponement before the statement was sent to the press.

What they were asking last night was "who put the screws on?" Although Barron has accepted complete responsibility for the postponement, everyone on the other side of the fence had the idea that the push originated from Capitol Hill.

As it is, though, the five-theater opening while the committee hearings are on probably will net bigger audiences and wider publicity than the original stunt could possibly have gotten.

U. S. Needs Huge Air Research Center, Says Gen. Le May

Creation of a huge air research center to regain world air supremacy for America, and keep it there, was urged yesterday by Maj. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay.

LeMay, deputy chief of the AAF staff for research and development, disclosed that the Air Force, Navy, National Advisory Council for Aeronautics and the aircraft industry had agreed upon plans for an "Air Engineering Development Center." He referred to the project in a speech delivered before the Air Force Association in Columbus.

Other officials here gave additional details. They described the project as calling for an "aviation Oak Ridge"—a great center for air development with its own housing community comparable to the atomic energy plant in Tennessee. Probable cost was estimated at approximately one half billion dollars.

A spokesman for the Joint Research and Development Board said the proposal—backed by the Army, Navy and NACA—was now before that body, but he would give no details.

LeMay said the project could not be financed out of funds available to the armed services for research. Instead, he said, it is planned to ask Congress to specifically appropriate for it over a period of years.

Adding to the great cost of the project is the need for building several super-sonic wind tunnels for aircraft and guided missiles traveling faster than sound. Their cost is astronomical. The center also would be equipped with the last word in instruments, test-stands and other equipment.

A large source of power will be required—approximately one million horsepower, said LeMay. Therefore the center would have to be built near one of the great waterpower projects.

Huge Testing Range Needed

A flat testing range covering 100 square miles also is required. Plans call for the center to be available to any agency in the United States that needs its facilities.

Priorities would be decided by a board composed of the interested Government agencies and the aircraft builders. A civilian director is planned, and backers of the project hope to recruit the Nation's leading scientists and engineers to join its staff.

Thus, virtually under one roof the Nation would have all the know-how and facilities to keep strong in the air. It would be costly, and involve a major decision for the United States, says LeMay.

"However," he adds, "in the view of those who have studied the matter most carefully and who are responsible for the continued security of the United States through aid power, the lack of such an air engineering development center will prove to be increasingly dangerous in the coming years and may even prove finally to be disastrous for the Nation."

Discoveries Announced by Top Chemists

New York, Sept. 16 (U.P.)—The top chemists of the land tonight announced an array of new developments in their science. They included:

1. Discovery of a method to produce diabetes in experimental animals, facilitating research in humans.

2. A new means of administering penicillin, making it possible for a patient to treat himself safely at home.

3. The possibility of a jet-propelled helicopter, still lighter, but capable of carrying heavier loads.

4. Development, in time, of new antidotes against lead poisoning.

5. A way to make better wine by enriching grapes with additional fruit enzymes.

[Atoms of lead, bismuth, thallium, platinum and lead have been split for the first time in the cyclotron, said Prof. Glenn T. Seaborg of the University of California. But no chain-reaction process is started by this splitting, he said, and "there is no possibility for their employment as sources of atomic energy."]

Mallon Ends Column, Plans to 'Go Fishing'

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—King Features Syndicate, Inc., announced today that Paul Mallon, writer of a column for the syndicate for the past 10 years, had terminated his contract.

A spokesman said Mallon gave no reason. In his last column today, however, Mallon wrote, "Today I feel strangely happy. With my turned-up pantaloons and homemade fishpole nine feet long, it is goodbye for the present to all my good readers. You have been swell to me for 15 long years. Don't you think a lot more people ought to go fishing?

FIESTA COMING UP. The former Treasure Island, a big and handsome spot holding around 400, has been renamed the Fiesta, will open on Thursday, September 25, with a full Manhattan revue and a dance band led by none other than Bill Strickland. This last is really something. Bill retired from the Lotus last year after more years as a maestro than anyone cares to mention, announced that he would devote all his energies to his booking agency. But you can't keep a firehorse from a fire or Strickland off a bandstand . . . Harry Quinq, expert restaurant man, will manage the Fiesta.

SHORELINERS INTO NEPTUNE. Nat Conway and his Shoreliners open tomorrow at the Neptune Room. Another newcomer, Arthur Post, New York pianist, will do the interludes. The Shoreliners' record in Baltimore is something to shoot at. They come direct from 11 months in the Biltmore Lounge, before that were at the Blue Mirror for two years, at the Coronet for 13 months, at the Summit Club for 18 months. Conway leads from a vibraphone backed up with electric guitar and string bass a la Adrian Rollini.

HAIL! HAIL! THE GANG'S ALL HERE! When Capt. Irving Fleisher, Special Services officer at Fort Myer, read in The Post that Georgia Butler was coming to the Anchor Room, he said to himself, "can that be the same Georgia Butler who made life seem gay even in that God-forsaken Adak in the Aleutians?" It was that same Georgia. And Cap Fleisher and 11 friends rolled into Anchor to renew palship. A bunch of G.I. Joes were there, too. It was quite an evening.

REUNION IN BALALAIKA. Lovely Gypsy Markoff, star of the Balalaika, expects her husband, Capt. David Harter of the Eighty-second Parachute Infantry, to arrive in Washington from Fort Bragg tomorrow . . . The new Balalaika show is a dream parade. Gypsy makes her accordion cry and laugh, changes her gown twice for one show. Vanya dances with unbelievable polish. Olga, the new blonde soprano, sings playful little Slavic things. Yourloff and Yoder dance a la Montenegro. Gavrela, new flaming dagger dancer, looks like Karloff at his most sinister, tosses his fiery knives with skill and abandon.

WHIDBEY ISLAND, Wash., Sept. 16.—For the next three months beginning with the California University game on September 27, the Nation's outstanding naval figure will be, with all due respect to Fleet Admiral Nimitz, a 23-year-old former Army private by the name of Dick Scott.

POVICH

At least that is the impression you gather in Navy's West Coast football camp on this wind-swept island where the Annapolis coaches babble of the feats of Roving Center Scott. They think he is the best college football player in the United States and say so out loud.

The whole Navy camp was miffed this week when the Saturday Evening Post in a preview of the 1947 season forecast the make-up of the All-America eleven for this year and omitted Scott from the first team, naming him on the second.

Jerry Flynn, chief of Navy's public relations staff, dismissed it all airily, however. "After all, it's only a 10-cent magazine," he points out. "Wait until the 25- and 50-cent mags come out with their selections and Scott will be on 'em."

NAVY does have a considerable guy in Scott, it seems, and when the Annapolis players met in secret at the end of last season to elect a captain for this year all formalities went out the window. Before the election meeting was called to order an unidentified lineman expressed himself. "This is silly," he said, "everybody wants Dick Scott for next year's captain." That constituted the election.

Scott got into the Naval Academy by mistake—West Point's mistake. Army had him in its own backyard at Highland Falls, N. Y., a West Point suburb, and the Scotts were practically a West Point family. His father ran the Cadet store on the campus and his brother manages the restaurant. But Army was not impressed with the schoolboy center to the point of wangling an appointment for him. Navy managed it 18 months later and came up with some kind of a prize.

He weighs 202 pounds now, stands six feet two inches, could graduate right onto a Hollywood set when he gets his Annapolis diploma, he is that handsome, and doesn't like it when he doesn't play 60 minutes of every game. He is the only triple threat football center in the world because he also kicks and passes. In the Army game last year he played every minute, got off the game's best punt and completed the one pass he threw.

NAVY treasures the movie films of the last Army game for the sequence wherein Doc Blanchard met up with Scott who was backing up the Navy line. They say it was the only time any tackler ever stopped Blanchard cold. They wave down Johnny Lujack's great tackle of Blanchard in the Army-Notre Dame game, pointing out that it was a nice tackle but Blanchard still made a couple of yards after he was hit.

Blanchard didn't get an inch after Scott hit him. The films show the Army powerhouse meeting Scott head on and getting dumped on his All-American posterior after being flung backwards by the impact. The films show Blanchard shaking his head incredulously as he picks himself up off the turf, wondering what hit him.

They pull Scott out of the line and set him in the fullback spot when they feel a kick coming on. In the last Army game that was the only reason Bill Jesse, second-string center, broke into the contest. After all, Scott couldn't snap the ball back to himself. And Scott doesn't necessarily kick when he takes the ball. He faked the kick once last year and completed a pass.

ANNAPOLIS people screamed last season when Scott wasn't in the first All-America team and was rated second behind Chuck Bednarik, Penn's good center. They say it was no contest when Navy played Penn last season and Scott made Bednarik look very inferior in their individual battle. They weren't content that Scott, who was playing with a team that lost eight of its nine ball games, was named to the second All-America.

As roving center on defense, he made the longest run by any Navy man last season. That was when he grabbed a North Carolina pass and took it 57 yards upfield. That run was something special because Scott is not fast and five different tacklers caught up with him but were shaken off. He got no touchdown because he finally stumbled and fell on his face.

Great Scott, I've gone overboard on the guy.

Skins, Bears Both Eager to Win Tonight

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Chicago, Sept. 16.—The Washington Redskins and the Chicago Bears, who should know each other by now, meet again tomorrow night in a game that means nothing in one way and a great deal in other ways.

Before a Soldier Field crowd almost certain to number 60,000, these long-time National Football League rivals clash in an exhibition for the benefit of the Armed For s Charity Fund. A mere exhibition it will be, but . . .

It's a "rubber" game for the teams. Eighteen times down the years they have squared off, each winning nine games. Ten of these were league games and they were split, too.

Prestige Rides on Result

On the outcome hinges a terrific amount of prestige, an item both teams sadly lack—the Redkins as a result of their sad showing against the Los Angeles Rams and the Bears because of their flailing by the 1947 All-Stars.

Sammy Baugh matches passes with Sid Luckman, which is just about the best matching you could do. The two greatest aerial artists of football, Texas Sam and Columbia Sid, face each other for the eighth year with these impressive lifetime pro passing marks:

Name	Yrs.	No. of Passes Att'mt.	Compl.	Pct.	Yardage
Baugh	10	1739	992	.570	12,549
Luckman	8	1171	604	.516	10,585

For the first time since 1937, when the Redskins took their last decision over the Bears in Chicago, Baugh is in good shape for tomorrow's game. Always before it's been one thing or another wrong with the drawling Texan and the 'Skins have felt it.

Now Baugh's condition nullifies any other edge the Chicagoans might boast in weight or experience and the teams are on an almost even plane.

In exhibitions, the Bears, after that 16-0 beating by the All-Stars, romped over Boston, 37-20, and later nosed olt the Philadelphia Eagles, 13-10. Washington, meanwhile, was recovering from a 20-7 rout by the Rams with a 23-14 margin over Bill Dudley and the Detroit Lions.

Only two Redskins are definitely out of the game. First-string Fullback Sal Rosato is still nursing the knee injury which has kept him idle to date and Halfback Jim Hefti cannot see action. He has a broken blood vessel in his leg.

Chance to Show Their Stuff

For the first time, if the weather remains clear, Coach Turk Edwards may get a line on his running game at the same time Baugh is working the air lanes with Tereshinski, Peebles, Taylor, &c., on the receiving end.

Wet fields have limited Dick Todd's sprinting to date and the 'Skins boss is anxious to further test big Jim Gaffney, the 200-pound Tennesseean who rang up two of the Redskins' third-quarter touchdowns against Detroit.

Opposing the Redskin speedsters will be a right fair group of ballluggers for the Bears. Bob Fenimore, All-America from Oklahoma A. & M. won't start but he's sure to be turned loose.

And there are Veterans George McAfee and Ray McLean and Newcomers Nick Sacrinty and Mike Holovak.

All in all, it ought to be a very interesting evening. But don't bet on the outcome.

Evans Big Factor

Nats Snap Out Of It, Wynn Posts 16th, 4-1

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Early Wynn won his 16th game of the season as the Nats snapped a six-game losing streak with a 4-1 victory over Detroit at Griffith Stadium last night.

Wynn, who was helped along by a two-run homer by Catcher Al Evans, restricted the second-place Tigers to four hits, while the Nats made eight off Hal Newhouser, who suffered his 17th loss, and Fred Hutchinson, who hurled the last two innings.

Al Evans put himself in solid with the sparse gathering by smacking a solid two-run homer off Newhouser in the second inning. Evans' blast over the temporary fence in left found Tom McBride, who had walked abroad. It was the second fourmaster of the year for him.

The Nats made it 3-0 in the fifth as Earl Wooten singled to drive in Sherry Robertson, who planted a triple in deep right center.

The Tigers, meanwhile, couldn't stir up anything against Wynn who was having one of his better nights. He had restricted 'em to only one hit—a second inning single by Newhouser—for the first five innings.

Wynn avoided additional trouble in the same inning when he engineered a double play on a hard-hit bounder to the box by Dick Wakefield. Vic Wertz, who had singled, was on first when Wynn tossed to Sullivan who relayed to Vernon for the twin killing to end the inning.

Evans batted in his third run of the evening in the bottom half of the sixth to stretch the Nat lead to 4-1. His towering fly to Wertz brought Vernon in from third. Vernon opened the inning with a single and went to third as McBride lashed out his second straight single.

Newhouser, who was trying for his sixteenth victory, wasn't arou his sixteenth victory, wasn't around after the seventh, being lifted for Pinch-hitter Pat Mullins when the Tigers tried to get something going. Mullin, however, failed to come through, popping to Sullivan to end the inning and leaving two runners stranded.

Fred Hutchinson was the new Tiger pitcher and was greeted by consecutive singles by Sullivan and Robertson. He bore down to fan Wynn, got Wooten on a pop to second and then teamed up with Hal Wagner and George Kell to erase Sullivan. Sullivan, on third, tried to come home on a double steal. Wagner, instead of throwing to second to try for Robertson, fired to Hutchinson who wheeled and threw to Kell and Sullivan was nabbed in the rundown.

Kinder's 71 Takes Medal

Jim Kinder, Kenwood, won medalist honors with a 71 yesterday in the qualifying round of the District Golf Association tournament at the Woodmont Club.

Kinder nosed out Charley Price, also of Kenwood, by one stroke while Ed Steptoe, Washington, and Dick Burgess, Argoyle, had 73s.

Two of the top favorites, Ralph Bogart, Chevy-Chase, and Bobby Brownell, Manor, were not at their best, scoring 75 and 77, respectively. Both qualified safely, however.

Scores of 80 were on the borderline, with eight playing off for the last seven places. The unlucky fellow was Everett Steinem, Woodmont, who lost out on the third extra hole.

Qualifying Scores:

71—Jim Kinder, Kenwood.
73—Charles Price, Kenwood.

Yankees Drub Browns, 8-3, Then Lose Second Game, 8-2

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—The last-place St. Louis Browns earned a split in their doubleheader with the New York Yankees today, winning the second game, 8-2, after the new American League champions had won the opener, 8-3.

The Browns executed eight double plays in the twin bill, five in the second game as Sam Zoldak spaced 10 Yankee hits for his eighth victory against nine defeats. oYung Karl Drews, first of four Yankee flingers, was charged with the defeat.

With all of the regulars, with the exception of Outfielder Tommy Henrich and Shortstop Phil Rizzuto getting a well deserved rest, the Yankees pounded Fred Sanford and Walter Brown for 14 hits to register an easy win in the opener.

Rookie Dick Starr, making his first start for the Yankees, gained his first victory, although he was hit solidly. Henrich chipped in with four safeties and drove in three runs to i.crease his season's RBI total to 94.

Texas League Sets Attendance Record

Dallas, Sept. 16 (AP).—The Texas League drew 1,946,181 paid admissions over the regular season route—the largest attendance in the 52-year history of the circuit and the third time it ever had registered over one million.

Poor Cards Pounded by Giants, 7-2

St. Louis, Sept. 16 (AP).—With all thoughts of overtaking the Brooklyn Dodgers practically gone now, the fast-fading St. Louis Cardinals were faced with the prospect of losing second place today as the New York Giants handed them their third straight licking, 7-2.

Rookie Ray Poat went all the way for the New Yorkers, limiting the defending chmpions to seven hits for his fourth victory against one defeat. Harry Brecheen was the loser, dropping his eleventh game against 15 wins.

The Cards broke a scoreless deadlock with a run in the fifth on a triple by Ron Northey and a single by Terry Moore, but the Giants moved in front 3-1 in the seventh on a double by Walker Cooper, a single by Willard Marshall and Sid Gordon's twelfth home run of the season.

Kavakos Beats Puerto Rico

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 16.—The Kavakos Grill men's team of Washington, D. C., today whipped the Puerto Rico entry in the world softball championships to remain undefeated in the tourney.

The score was 3-2 and the winning run came in the last of the seventh with two out. It was the first loss for the Puerto Ricans.

Puerto Ricans scored first, getting two runs on four hits in the second off Fred Kramer. A hit batsman, singles by Charles Heinbaugh and Art Brasse plus an overthrow, enabled the Kavakos team to tie the score in the third.

Jack Smith took over the pitching duties for Washington in the fifth when Puerto Rico threatened and he set them down in a hurry. His battery mate, Len Lamb, socked a double in the seventh to score Heinbaugh from first with the winning run.

The Kavakos now stand by until Thursday when they play Fort Wayne, Ind., defending champions team, once defeated, meets Fresno, Calif., Wednesday night.

Steelers Don't Feel Dudley's Loss at Gate

Pittsburgh, Sept. 16 (AP).—If the Pittsburgh Steelers were ever nervous about losing Bullet Bill Dudley to the Detroit Lions, they weren't today—upon hearing the news that the 1947 season ticket sale is double that of last year.

Articulate over the fat incoming stream of greenbacks, Joe Carr, the club's ticket manager, declared: "We didn't lose a customer when Bill Dudley quit."

For specific figures, Carr reported the advance sale is 22,000 compared with 9800 last year with some 40,000 spectators expected Sunday for the Steelers' National League opener against Detroit.

Incidentally the game will be a bargain bill because the crowd will see both the Steelers and Dudley at once.

Branca Holds Redlegs for 21st Victory

Cincinnati, Sept. 16 (AP).—The pennant-bound Brooklyn Dodgers moved 8½ games ahead of the St. Louis Cardinals today by taking the third and final game of the series from the Cincinnati Reds, 7-3.

With 10 games left to play, the Dodgers can clinch the National League flag by winning four of them. Four Cardinal defeats also would do the trick.

Ralph Branca scattered 12 hits effectively to register his twenty-first triumph, tying him with Cincinnati's Ewell Blackwell for the most wins in the majors.

Phils Nose Bucs, 2-1, Vacate Cellar

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 16 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phils bounced out of the National League cellar today as Blix Donnelly scattered nine Pittsburgh hits to beat the Pirates, 2-1 before 2568 fans.

An unearned run by Charley Gilbert in the fourth, and another by Del Ennis in the eighth, with the aid of an error and two walks, gave Donnelly his victory.

Mel Queen, who retired the first 10 Phils in order, was charged with the defeat, giving up the winning run when he walked Ennis across the plate.

2 Apprentice Jockeys Injured in Separate Spills at Marlboro

Bill Bennings

At Marlboro.

DEAR FOLKS: Somebody wants to know if it is possible for a horse to pay more to place than to win in the mutuels. The answer is yes. This happens many times, especially when there is a dead heat for the win position. I have seen the place price top the win price without a dead heat. This is possible because the win and place pools are separate operations. The condition books for the Laurel meeting are out and many of the races are named for points of interest in Washington and vicinity. For instance there's the Tidal Basin, the Walter Reed, the Bolling Field, the Georgetown, the College Park and so forth. Looks as if Brother Parr and company really intend to make Laurel Washington's own track. The Wednesday Marlboro program has the accent on sprints. Only one distance race is carded. Charlie Keller, veteran race track telegrapher, has entered the Sinai Hospital in Baltimore for a check-up. See you on the rail . . .

Marlboro, Md., Sept. 16.—Two apprentice jockeys were injured, one slightly, in separate spills here this afternoon. Benjamin Brady of Bowie, Md., suffered a badly cut left foot as the result of an accident in the second race, while Edward Hopkins escaped with a shaking up and bruises as the result of falling with his mount in the seventh event.

Brady was aboard P. W. Page's Teddy Smart, the favorite, and was five lengths in front when the 4-year-old suddenly bolted into the fence and rolled over. Some witnesses on the backstretch reported the horse shied from the starting gate placed on the outside of the track.

To Be Out for Month

His cut required many stitches and tendons were severed. It was reported he would be out of action at least a month.

Hopkins was in the rear of the field in the seventh race and on S. J. Nimzak's Pickworth, a long shot. He attempted to send the mare through on the rail inside a horse when the animal appeared to stumble and roll over the boy.

He was taken to the track hospital but came to later. After complaining of pains in the stomach, he refused hospital treatment and said he was only hungry.

The day's feature race, the Draymont Purse went to the Washington owned Kitty Kilts under the guidance of Jockey Palumbo who reutrned to action today after being on the sick list. Kitty Kilts came to the finish line 2½ lengths in front of Dr. A. S. Moore's Gal Royal with Mrs. Mary Knieriem's Red Wrack in third position in the field of eight.

8000 Attend Program

Perfect racing weather served to bring out a crowd of 8000 and the customers made Kitty Kilts the favorite. She returned a $5.60 mutuel and was clocked in 1:24 4/5 over the fast track while carrying 121 pounds.

Palumbo went to the front at the break and stayed there all the way. Gal Royal was an energetic second but could not seriously menace the winner while Red Wrack rallied to close with a rush to be third.

Jacoby Enters Regatta Races

Interest in the outboard division of the President's Cup Regatta powerboat races next Saturday and Sunday in the Georgetown Channel off Hains Point skyrocketed yesterday with the announcement by Chairman Eric Greenleaf that Fred Jacoby jr., favorite of regatta followers in the prewar days, has filed his entry.

Jacoby, who hails from North Bergen, N. J., is generally regarded in Coast-to-Coast motorboat circles as a wreckless outboard pilot. For years he monopolized the hydroplane events. He wasn't here for the revival last season, and his return is good news to local officials.

Jacoby is entering three boats in at least four events. His craft are all named Flyaway.

The committee also received the entry of Franklin Foulke, of Essex, Md., whose Sagana VIII last year smashed two regatta records in the Class D inboard competition.

Another champion, Merlin Culver, of Dayton, Ohio, has entered his Yankee Doodle V, which won the 135-cubic-inch crown as well as the Jafco Trophy last year.

Tickets are on sale at the Willard Hotel, priced at 75 cents.

Giants Purchase Two

St. Louis, Sept. 16 (AP).—The New York Giants today announced the purchase of Mario Picone, right-handed pitcher, and Catcher Sal Yvars from their Jersey City farm of the International League. Both players will join the Giants in Chicago tomorrow.

St. Louis School Will Not Charge For Sports Events

St. Louis, Sept. 16 (AP).—Suburban Clayton High School, with an enrollment of approximately 850 students, announced today that it is abolishing admission fees for all sports events this year.

Superintendent John L. Bracken said the move was not an attempt to deemphasize athletics.

He said he had long been searching for a method to combat parents' objections to basketball games on week nights.

"Under this new setup," Bracken explained, "with all sports budgeted as a part of our physical education program, we can schedule our games immediately after school. In this way the student body, as well as the players, will have their games and still have time for their studies.

"Why should taxpayers be forced to pay to see part of their educational system functioning when they already have coptributed liberally?" he added.

Packers Trim Squad

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 16 (AP).—The Green Bay Packers of the National Football League reduced their roster to 38 players today by releasing Baxter Jarrell, a tackle from the University of North Carolina.

National Weather Summary

24-HOUR FORECAST—The raging hurricane which Weather Bureau forecasters have been carefully following was centered over Great Abaco, the Bahamas at 12:45 p. m., EST, Tuesday. This severe storm appeared to be moving westward at 5 to 7 miles per hour and is critically close to the Florida coast. All interests along the east Florida coast have been advised to make preliminary precautions and stand by for possible issuance of hurricane warnings.

The weather employe at Hopetown, Bahamas, ceased activity as 160-mile winds lashed his post and the station barometer had dropped to 28.52 inches pressure. Northeast storm warnings are hoisted from Palm Beach, Fla., to Cape Hatteras. Strong northeast winds are indicated northward to the Virginia Capes late Wednesday.

Rain and showers are predicted from the upper Lakes to Kansas and Nebraska while showers will develop in the Northwest, eastern Arizona and along the coast from Florida to Virginia. Most of the United States will have sunshine today except for cloudy skies in the precipitation areas.

Maximum temperatures today will be in the comfortable 70s from New York and Pennsylvania to the Lakes region; in the 80s in the lower Ohio Valley and the central Plains. During the afternoon the Gulf States will have 90 degrees maxima while the northern Plains will record the fallish 50s.

Early today the mercury will be in the upper 30s in sections of Oregon, Montana and North Dakota. Weather records show September is the dry season in the Great Plains with killing frosts occurring as far south as Kansas one year in five. Farmers will be carefully watching for a high pressure cell to build up in Canada and send cold northerly blasts into the northern Plains, ending the growing season for crops which are being harvested behind schedule this year.

Today's maximum temperature forecasts include St. Louis and Nashville, 85; Cleveland, 84; Atlanta, 82; Boston and Hartford, 76; Washington, 75; New York, Philadelphia and Detroit, 74; Milwaukee, Buffalo and Pittsburgh, 72, and Kansas City, 80.

Truman Board Urged to End Wasteful Airline Competition

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Top officials of America's biggest airline system yesterday assailed "wasteful competition" as a major cause of current aviation ills and urged that the Government ban any new air routes for the time being.

Slater

C. R. Smith, chairman of American Airlines, and John E. Slater, chairman of American Overseas Airlines, proposed the moratorium on new routes before President Truman's temporary air policy commission.

Merger of the independent Civil Aeronautics Board and the Civil Aeronautics Administration of the Department of Commrce was recommended by Smith. At present, he declared, the situation permits each agncy to "pass the buck" when there is criticism of public regulation of aviation.

Smith, wartime deputy commander of the Army Air Transport Command and long a leader in the commercial air field, charged that the Civil Aeronautics Board had adopted a policy of "competition for the sheer sake of competition" in granting numerous extensions of air routes.

"We need time to digest the many recent additions to the air map," General Smith said. "The industry needs, presently, more attention to route operation and less attention to route expansion."

Urge Interchanging Equipment

A moratorium, he declared, would point the way to a better solution of United States airway needs. This, Smith declared, would be "an application of the relatively untried principle of interchange of equipment between air carriers as the more logical and efficient means of providing direct one-plane service to the most people."

Interchange or through routing of vehicles, he pointed out, has been used by railroads for years.

Thinks Enough Are Licensed

Slater told the Finletter Commission that he considered the number of companies now holding certificates for international air transport to be "entirely adequate" for the present or foreseeable future.

He urged that no more international certificates be granted until those now in the field demonstrate they are capable of developing into strong and financilly sound institutions and more is konwn of the amount of overseas air service needed.

Carleton Putnam, president of Chicago & Southern Airlines, urged that the commission indorce present provisions for Government aid to the air transport companies. He defended the current airmail subsidy as economically justified and criticized what he said was a prevalent tendency to consider the payments a "dole."

Urges Multilateral Pacts

Slater advocated that the United States join in a multilateral agreement with other nations providing for exchange of air rights, rather than by bilateral treaties. But he urged that the United States stand firmly behind the principles adopted in the Anglo-American agreement reached at Bermuda in February, 1946, and refuse to sign any agreement compromising them.

In urging less cutthroat competition among airlines, Smith cited the history of the Chicago-to-Washington air route. Originally, one carrier provided service between the two cities. In 1943, the CAB certificated two other lines and later a fourth. They maintain 40 to 50 flights a day.

Not one of these companies is making money today and some of them are taking heavy losses, Smith said. Two companies, operating with fair rate schedules and making reasonable profit, would be better for the Nation, than four running into the hole, he contended.

Opposes Government Pool

The American Airlines chief declared that the Air Force should have the responsibility for developing new transport plane types, but opposed proposals to create a Government pool of reserve craft available for leasing to airlines.

However, he recommended an Army-Navy reserve corps in civil air transport and suggested that annual maneuvers be held in which the Air Force and the airlines cooperate in military problems.

Meanwhile, the Congressional Air Policy Board—which has a mission identical with that of the President's commisson—held its first hearings. The group, headed by Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), heard George Kennan, head of the State Department planning staff, in executive session.

Then the board adjourned until September 30.

160 Are Enrolled At Charlotte Hall

Charlotte Hall, Md., Sept. 16.—A capacity enrollment of 160 students at Charlotte Hall Military Academy was reported today by Maj. M. D. Burgee, principal, as the school opened its doors for its 175th consecutive year.

Major Burgee also announced two new appointments to the faculty. Col. Norwood Sothoron, a graduate of the University of Maryland, will have charge of the entire military program. He is an alumnus of Charlotte Hall, and attained his rank during the war.

Capt. Joseph I. Puente, formerly of the faculty of the University of Kentucky, has been appointed instructor in Spanish, French and Latin. A native of Spain, Captain Puente studied at the University of Puerto Rico and the University of Kentucky.

Stork Pays 15 Visits in 9 Hours

Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 16 (AP).—The stork, one bird that doesn't seem to be bothered by the heat, made 15 trips to the Lancaster Central Hospital in less than nine hours yesterday—a new record for the institution.

The mark surpassed the previous record of 14 babies in 12 hours. Last week twins and triplets were born in the hospital within an hour.

Mason-Dixon Sets Tourneys

Baltimore, Sept. 16 (AP).—Representatives of the 13 member colleges of the Mason-Dixon Conference today had set schedules for their winter and spring sports championships, switching the basketball play-offs to Baltimore in the principal change.

The tourney in which the conference's top eight teams compete will be played March 4, 5 and 6. Last year it was held at Catholic University in Washington. The conference has an invitation from the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association to send its champion to the annual tournament in Kansas City. Loyola participated last year.

The conference has added junior varsity basketball to its competition. American University, Catholic, Hampden-Sydney, Hopkins, Loyola, Mount St. Mary's, Randolph-Macon, Towson, Washington and Western Maryland will enter teams.

The wrestling championships will be returned to Western Maryland College on February 27-28. American University will be host to the swimming championships on March 15. The track and field championships will be under auspices of American University on May 15. The cross-country title will be decided November 24 over the Gallaudet course.

8 Lettermen Back

This May Be Best Season For Bethesda

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

THE BETHESDA - CHEVY CHASE BARONS have been playing football for only four years, yet they have the distinction of having played longer than any other high school in Montgomery County.

Since the Barons began football, six other Montgomery County schools have taken up the game and these newcomers have not always showed much respect for the oldest team in the county. Bethesda won only two games last season while losing six.

This is another year, however, and Coach Ray Fehrman and his assistant, Allan Vogt, have been working hard to shape a winner out Bethesda way.

Eight lettermen, including three regulars, are back from last year's team. Fehrman feels that a year's experience has given these holdovers the necessary seasoning to become good players.

The three regulars are all linemen, Tackle Dick Stratten, Guard Bob Mook and End Dave Parkinson.

The other ends are Dick Beck with, Mike Meredith and Buster Pickett, while the tackles includes Stratten, John Tancil, Bob Reid, Peyton Fletcher and Bill Pickett.

AT THE GUARDS are Mook, Jim Brown, Bo Dyer and Walter Dauber, and three centers, Harry Clarkson, Art Crago and Bill Beringer complete the line candidates.

The first-string backfield lines up with Henry Kamp, Don Schneider, Lou Deschler and Roddy Ware. Kamp and Schneider are passers, Deschler the blocker, and Ware the kicking expert. The best running back on the team is Herbie Spain, a scatback who is used in spots.

Other backfield candidates are Joe Buell, Dave Rice, Chuck Gardner and John Van Wagner.

Bethesda will field a small but scrappy team. The line should average around 170 and the backfield only 145 pounds. The Barons aren't worried about their size, though. They figure a few solid blocks and jarring tackles will cut any team down to their own dimensions.

Baltimore Group Picks Stadium Site

Baltimore, Sept. 16 (AP).—Mayor D'Alesandro's stadium committee today selected the site of the present arena at 33d st. to be the location of Baltimore's new sports arena.

The group earlier had recommended three possible locations. In addition to the one chosen today, they included Clifton Park and Herring Run Park.

A loan of $2,500,000 was approved earlier this year for the construction of a municipal stadium.

NFFE Marks 30th Year Of Union Activity

Unique Group's Actions Confound Its Critics But Has Paid Off

By Jerry Kluttz

Kluttz

The NFFE is unique because it has confounded its critics and it does things in a different way. For example, not so many months ago this independent union appeared to be working against its own interests and its members when it said there were too many Federal workers.

Also, it says the Federal worker loyalty program doesn't go far enough, and its original constitution carried a flat no-strike provision, the first of its kind to be adopted by any union.

But its unpredictable actions have paid off. The NFFE today has nearly 1000 locals and about 100,000 members. It's the oldest and largest of all Federal worker unions. It has a mass of Federal employe reform legislation to its credit, the job classification and retirement acts and various acts that provided higher salaries and better working conditions—legislation the skeptics denounced as "visionary and impractical" 30 years ago.

"First Lady of Labor"

The union has in its ranks the First Lady of Labor, Gertrude M. McNally, who has been its secretary-treasurer since shortly after its inception. No other woman today can approach her labor record.

And Miss McNally holds another "first." She was one of the organizers of the first all-women labor groups, the Women's Union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. That was in 1909, and she has held the post of corresponding secretary of that pioneer union—now a part of NFFE—since then, a little matter of 38 years.

Miss McNally likes to recall the first meeting her group had with the director of the bureau. She was the spokesman and she told the hard-shelled director that cockroaches were in the soup being served to BEP employes. The director answered:

"But you don't have to pay for the cockroaches."

Miss McNally pressed the issue and it wasn't long before the BEP lunchroom was cleaned up.

Her NFFE teammate is Luther C. Steward, who has been president of the union for the past 29 years. This pair has initiated more Federal worker legislation than any dozen members of Congress. They are recognized authorities on the Government and its personnel.

On the walls of their offices are framed the pens that Presidents have used to sign the legislation they sponsored.

Roosevelt Letter Prized

The late President Roosevelt sent his famous letter on the Government's labor policy to the Steward-McNally team and not to Federal agencies. In that letter, the President explained the different relationships between private and Federal employes. He pointed out that Federal workers could neither bargain collectively nor could they strike. The Roosevelt policy is now accepted Government policy, but it was a pattern that had long been advocated by NFFE.

The Steward-McNally team will tell you today:

"Federal salaries as a whole aren't high enough and in the long run that isn't sound economy for the taxpayers. But it isn't only a matter of salaries.

"What we need is an entirely new attitude toward the Federal service. We don't like so-called bureaucrats and so-called red tape any better than anyone else.

"But to deal with all Federal personnel problems, as so many people airily do, as being simply a symptom of bureaucracy at its worst is futile and unrewarding. Not every administrator is a bureaucrat any more than every businessman is a tycoon. William S. Knudsen spoke a revealing truth when he said that 'in big industry we have red tape too, only we don't call it red tape, we call it system.'

Stress Merit System

"What we're working for is a Federal service based solely on merit, with promotion for proved efficiency, and retirement at the conclusion of a career; a service which stimulates every man and woman to give his best, a service which will attract and hold the best and most capable men and women for a career of public service."

The Stewart-McNally team attribute much of the success of NFFE to the fact that it has consistently refused to wander up blind alleys and to mix up in all sorts of causes. It has stuck closely to its big job of improving the lot of the Federal employe.

The NFFE birthday will be celebrated tonight by dinners throughout the country. The dinner here will be in the Washington Hotel.

PAY RAISES: Chairman Langer of the Senate Civil Service Committee has come out flatly for a cost-of-living wage boost for Federal workers. His program, he said, is to first get congressional approval of a liberalized retirement system, and then to work for higher salaries. "Higher living costs," he said, "are causing Federal workers to suffer."

Mrs. Durant Posts Bond of $5000 To Win Freedom

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 16 (AP). Former WAC Capt. Kathleen Nash Durant, sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the Hesse crown jewel theft, obtained her freedom on bond today.

The 43-year-old Mrs. Durant left the courthouse after executing a $5000 bond which Federal Judge Ben Moore required before formally releasing her on a writ of habeas corpus from the Federal reformatory for women at Alderson, W. Va.

The Government has indicated it may appeal to the United States Circuit Court Judge Moore's ruling which held that Mrs. Durant was a civilian at the time of her Army court martial in Germany and that the military tribunal lacked jurisdiction.

Mrs. Durant said she planned to leave Alderson this weekend for New York to visit her husband, former Col. Jack Durant, who was sentenced to 15 years after his conviction in the theft of the royal gems, valued at $1,500,000.

Judge Suspends Doctor's Sentence On Sex Charge

Gettysburg, Pa., Sept. 16.—Dr. Robert S. Lefever drew a suspended sentence yesterday from Judge W. C. Sheely in Adams County Court on a sexual relations charge on which he was convicted by a jury last month.

A former patient, Mrs. Rita Dryer, then employed as a dishwasher in a local restaurant, charged that Dr. Lefever had sexuel relations with her on an office visit last November.

Judge Sheely directed the physician to pay court costs totaling $107 and said: "Imposition of a fine would be meaningless because of the amount spent by you in the case and the effect of the case upon you."

The physician had asked for a new trial after his conviction last month, but appeared in court yesterday and withdrew the motion for a new trial.

Kerlin Heads Fight Against High Prices

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 16 (AP).—Dr. Robert T. Kerlin, former college teacher, has been elected chairman of the newly organized Cumberland chapter of the Progressive Citizens of America.

He said the local group is opposed to the sales tax and will fight against it in every campaign. He also said a campaign will be started to combat high prices. Dr. Kerlin was one time editor of the Western Maryland edition of the CIO news.

Fairfax Board to Talk School Construction

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors will meet with the school board today at 2 p. m. to discuss county school construction contemplated and in process.

In the morning the supervisors will hear the views of the county public utilities commission on the aerial transmission line which Virginia Electric & Power Co. proposes to string through 17 miles of the county.

Vepco-Union Talks Set

Richmond, Va., Sept. 16 (AP).—Governor Tuck's office received notice today from Eugene B. Crutchfield, chairman of the board of trustees of the Utility Workers Union, an independent organization, that representatives of the union and Virginia Electric and Power Company would meet tomorrow to ope ncollective bargaining negotiations.

Just a Brush

Judge Rules Mop Battle Is a Draw

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

It all started with a mop being shaken from a window at 332 Ridge rd. se.

On the shaking end was Mrs. Walter Ayres, 31, according to testimony in Municipal Court yesterday.

On the receiving end was Mrs. Louise Heaps, also of the Ridge rd. address.

"I told her to stop—that the dirt was blowing into my rooms and when she refused, I grabbed the mop," Mrs. Heaps said. "I let go suddenly and Mrs. Ayres fell off the front porch."

With Mrs. Ayres hors de combat, Mrs. Heaps said, the cause was taken up by the former's spouse. Mrs. Heaps said he called her vile names and defiled my character in front of my children."

Mrs. Heaps said that in retaliation she hit Ayres with a broom whereupon the latter "cracked me in the arm with the mop with all his force.

Ayres, charged with simple assault, denied the charge.

"I can bring in witnesses by droves to prove Mrs. Heaps used vile language and hit me first," he said. He told Municipal Court Judge Neilson he is looking for a new place to live.

"This is a perfect Martin and Coy case except for the shotgun and mountains," Judge Neilson observed. "You are all old enough to know better. If you cannot live in peace someone had better move away. Case dismissed."

Milk Shortage Facing Dairies At Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 16 (AP).—The prospect of a milk shortage faces Cumberland dairies unless farmers' demands for increased prices are met.

Approximately 150 members of the Tri-State Milk Producers' Association met last night and voted to insist upon a fair return for their product, according to O. C. Hepner, Fort Ashby, W. Va., secretary.

"Members of the association have been treated as radicals by some local dairy plant managers because they have made inquiries concerning rates," Hepner said. "We must have a reasonable profit over our cost."

Hepburn stated a committee has been named to consult wtih dairy managers. Regular milk is retailing at 19 cents a quart, the highest price in history.

D. C. Guard Begins Drive For Recruits

Ceremonies on Mall Open 2-Month Effort To Add 3200 to Roll

The District National Guard, in conjunction with the first National Guard Day, launched its two-month recruiting drive with ceremonies yesterday afternoon on the Mall.

Seventeen Thunderbolts, manned by pilots of the District Air National Guard, roared overhead from nearby Andrews Field to display attractions of that arm of Guard service. On the Mall below, some 300 prospective recruits inspected the latest in Guard equipment and were entertained by the AAF Band, from Andrews Field.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding officer of the District Guard, spoke briefly on the need of a "basic reserve component of both the Army and Air Forces."

The District's quota of the national recruiting drive for 88,888 new guardsmen is 535 men. Recruiting officers, however, said the local organization was hoping to enlist 3200, to bring the District National Guard to its full authorized strength of 4000 before the end of the two-month drive.

Ray H. Brannaman, new-elected commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, pledged the "wholehearted" support of his organization in the national drive as "only the beginning."

Capt. P. A. Dieterich, master of ceremonies, explained how the National Guard is striving to reach a force of 682,000 at M Day (Mobilization Day), capable of swinging into action at 24 hours' notice.

The exhibits included a Thunderbolt placed so that spectators could investigate the cockpit, and a .50 caliber quad anti-aircraft gun.

Jr. Police Corps Wins Praise for Delinquency Work

The Junior Police and Citizens Corps was praised yesterday by Assistant Attorney General Theron Lamar Caudle for its work here in combating juvenile deliquency.

Speaking before members of the Advertising Club of Washington at a luncheon at the Hotel Statler, he stressed the need to combat the forces behind delinquency in preference to letting juvenile courts and training schools combat the problem.

"Youngsters who have an opportunity to enjoy clean sports and decent recreation are less likely to get into trouble," he declared. He placed the responsibility for providing such recreation on the community and named the Junior Police and Citizens Corps as an outstanding organization working toward that end.

Prisoner Fights 5 in Arlington Court Fracas

It took five men to subdue a reluctant prisoner yesterday in the Arlington County sheriff's office in the courthouse.

The prisoner, William T. Higgins, 29, of 2308 N. 10th st., Arlington, had appeared before County Judge Hugh Reid and had been ordered committed to Western State Hospital at Staunton, Va., for treatment as a mental dipsomaniac.

Higgins started to leave the office and was grabbed by Deputy Sheriff J. Rufus Trice. They grappled and fell to the floor. Higgins broke free and this time Sheriff Homer G. Bauserman grabbed him. Archie Richards, circuit court bailiff, joined the struggle and was struck.

The trio was joined by two Arlington County policemen and Higgins yielded to force of numbers.

New Building Fire Safety Minimums Are Relaxed

D. C. Commissioners Approve Modified Code Recommended By 19-Man Group

The Commissioners yesterday approved modifications relaxing stringent fire safety laws for new buildings in the District.

Building Inspector Robert H. Davis said they will "go into effect immediately."

The less restrictive regulations, he predicted, will give advantages in some cases where construction is already under way.

Non-residential buildings of low fire hazard, for example, will now be able to use wood panel doors in some cases instead of fire doors, he pointed out.

"But buildings must conform to these regulations or we won't issue permits," he warned.

Complicance Cost Cited

The strict new regulations were adopted by the Commissioners in March, 1946. Davis said the code has been in effect for new buildings ever since, although the Commissioners delayed its enforcement in existing buildings twice to April 1, 1948.

Modifications in the code affecting new buildings weer drawn up by a 19-member committee after building owners complained of the cost of compliance.

All 13 persons who testified at a Commissioners' public hearing September 5 indorsed the committee's recommendations for new buildings.

Major Relaxations

Major modications, Davis said, are:

1. Minimum seating capacity for rooms classed as public meeting places increased from 50 to 125.

2. Open stairways and escalators that don't lead directly to outside exits may now be protected with wired glass or automatic sprinkler systems rather than enclosed in masonry.

3. Half of the exist stairways required in commercial buildings may now discharge into an open lobby instead of directly outside. Stairs from main lobbies to mezzanines no longer need be enlsode.

4. Required width of exit passageways in restaurants reduced from 5 to 4 feet.

Standpipe Size Reduced

5. Entrance doors to major stairways reduced from minimum width of 44 inches to 36 inches. Minimum width for exist doors, however, remains 44 inches.

6. Combustible acoustical material may now be used in fully fire-resistant commercial buildings for areas not exceeding 5000 square feet.

7. Size of standpipes (inside fire hydrants) reduced from 6 to 4 inch diameter.

8. Schools for adults may now be permitted in office buildings under certain conditions.

9. Patrons may use lobbies and foyers of theaters for waiting space if exits aren't blocked.

Carnival Dancer Held Here After Ex-Employer Dies

Marian Harris, 21, of Atlanta, Ga., former carnival dancer, was held here on manslaughter charges yesterday following the death in Hendersonville, N. C., of her one-time employer.

The employer, James Brown, 59, was assistant manager of a minstrel troupe with the Endy Brothers carnival, which played Washington the last week in August. Miss Harris told police she had an altercation with him over back pay.

After the fight, Brown was taken to Gallinger Hospital and treated for knife wounds, but did not press charges of assault with a dangerous weapon. The charges were dropped and Brown left the city.

Upon word of Brown's death from Hendersonville police yesterday, authorities here arrested Miss Harris at 2622 E st. ne., about noon. She was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. Hearing date was set for next Tuesday pending a coroner's report.

Man Enters Neighbor's House By Error; Wounded by Police

INTRUDER'S WAY—Mrs. Hewitt Robertson of 5512 Center st., Chevy Chase, Md., looks through shattered doorway

A 23-year-old man was shot and wounded by police yesterday after he had broken into a Chevy Chase, Md., home believing it to be his own and threatened to kill the occupants.

Sergt. DeNell

They said that shortly after 7 a. m., Mrs. Hewitt Griggs Robertson and her son, Hewitt G. Robertson, jr., 22, of 5512 Center st., Chevy Chase, were awakened by a pounding on the door.

Wagstaff, according to police, ripped the screen from the back door of the Robertson house, shattered the glass and pulled out part of the wood frame to gain entrance.

The man, police said, was carrying what appeared to be a shotgun, and ran through the house threatening to kill Mrs. Robertson and her son unless they showed him where "Ruth" was.

Mrs. Robertson managed to escape from the house and called police. When Bethesda police arrived, Wagstaff was on the second floor. He threatened to kill anyone who came after him. Police Sergt. W. T. DeNell shot from the foot of the stairs and wounded Wagstaff in the left shoulder after which he surrendered.

He was removed to Rockville jail after treatment at Suburban Hospital. There he was charged with assaulting a policeman, housebreaking and destroying private property. Bond was set at $2000 and a preliminary hearing for September 29.

Police said the "Ruth" for whom Wagstaff was searching is his sister. They believe he thought he was in his own home which is only a block away. The "shotgun" turned out to be only a piece of wood.

Police said the man will be released on bond today if the family can arrange with the Veterans Administration for hospitalization. He is a veteran of four years in the Navy and two in the Coast Guard.

Wagstaff previously had been charged with drunk and disorderly conduct and reckless driving by Bethesda police and the case was to be heard Friday. It is expected this hearing will be delayed pending outcome of the more recent charges. Police said Wagstaff was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon in connection with a shooting last year in Las Vegas, Nev.

Laundries Checked for Clew In Attack on D. C. Woman

An area-wide check on laundries was launched by police yesterday to identify marks found on a khaki tie with which a "mad strangler" tried to garrot a 34-year-old woman early near her 16th st. apartment.

Mrs. Sado told police she was returning from a late movie when a khaki clad man stole up behind her and attempted to starngle her.

Unable to find parking space at midnight after circling the area three times in her car, Mrs. Sado said she parked her auto on Mount Pleasant st., near Lamont st., in a limited parking zone, then walked toward 16th st.

"My head was snapped back. I thrust a hand under what felt like a tie and screamed—it seemed a 1,000 times."

MRS. SANDRA SADO

Rep. Youngblood Says Cafe Served 'Spoiled' Sandwich

He charged that the sandwich was made with decomposed chicken, and said tests by the District Health Department confirmed this.

Youngblood, 40-year-old plumbing and heating contractor from Detroit, Mich., signed formal complaint before Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Chalfonte yesterday afternoon. Chalfonte said a summons would be issued today aganist the cafe proprietor for appearance in Municipal Court on a charge of violation of District food regulations.

The representative, who is a member of the House District subcommittee on health and education, declared he was taking the action "to keep this man from making others sick, not for revenge."

He said he bought the sandwich at a cafe near the Capitol about 6 p.m., last Friday, for his daughter, Nancy, 9, who was waiting with her mother in his congressional office. Mrs. Youngblood, he said, took the first bite and became ill, almost immediately.

Youngblood said he wrapped the sandwich up and turned it over to police. It was placed in refrigeration immediately, he said, and later tested by Health Department inspectors and found decomposed.

The cafe proprietor, the Congressman said, became "hostile and arrogant" when confronted by Youngblood after his wife's illness.

W. W. Burdett, Health Department inspector, attested to the findings of tests made on the sandwich.

Mysterious Gas Gags Fla. Beach Baskers

Jacksonville Beach, Fla., Sept. 16 (U.P.).—A mysterious, irritating gas which caused throat tickling, spasms of coughing and a run on cough drops plagued this playground beach for a short time today. Health officers said no illnesses were reported.

The gas, believed to have been released from a sunken military vessel on the bottom of the Atlantic, was wafted in last night on pre-hurricane breezes. Stronger winds today dissersed the gas.

Lock Picking Enables Two To Flee Jail In Arlington

One Prisoner Makes Escape For Second Time Within a Month

Ray

This time he took with him another prisoner, Paul Crews, 30, of 1910 Fort Myer dr., Arlington, who was reported to be armed.

The escape, accomplished at about 9:20 a.m., was made easier by these factors:

Ray, who in recent months has divided his time between the Arlington jail and his District residence at 448 H st. nw, walked out of the jail on August 23. Three days later he was captured by District police while trying to pry open a safe in the offices of the City Finance Co., 515 8th st. se. He was returned to Arlington to await trial on charges of breaking and entering.

After yesterday's break, more than 20 policemen in scout cars and motorcycles converged on 14th st. and Maine ave. sw., where the pair had forced a truck driver to take them at gun point.

The driver of the truck, Charles Marshall of Chesterbrook Farm, Va., said the man identified as Crews pressed a revolver into his back and forced him to drive from Lee blvd. to Shirley hwy. and then across the 14th st. bridge. After crossing the bridge, he turned down the ramp leading to Maine ave. and the men got out.

Lack of Guards Cited.

Arlington County Jailer Roland Howes, commenting on the escape, complained about the lack of personnel at the jail and its antiquated locks. Only one man, Howes, was on duty yesterday morning. Howes had to leave the jail to take some prisoners to police court in the nearby courthouse.

The jailer said he had been asking for new locks on the cells for sometime. The ones now in use are 20 years old. Late yesterday, Sheriff Homer G. Bauserman telephoned a locksmith and ordered that the ancient padlocks be replaced with modern locks.

The report said the space and facilities were "not equal to the task of maintaining a safe and secure jail."

There were 21 prisoners including Ray and Crews in the jail yesterday. Six of them could have joined in the break, but apparently chose to remain.

Monkey Worsts Porcupine

Baltimore, Sept. 16 (AP).—Wilton, the porcupine, finally ran out of ammunition, so Charlie, the terrible monkey, won out in the end. Wilton was found dead this morning on the floor of their cage at the Baltimore Zoo.

Keepers put them together some time ago because Charlie was always beating up the other monkeys and they thought Wilton might tone him down a bit.

Crowds 12 deep have stood around the cage watching Charlie pull out quills after a brush with Wilton. But Wilton couldn't grow replacements fast enough. For a couple of weeks now he's been almost nude—looked like a piece of old rug.

Zoo Director Felix Leser thinks maybe Charlie scared Wilton to death. There weren't any marks on Wilton's body.

J. O'D. Moran To Join ABC Board Today

Attorney James O'Donnell Moran will be sworn in today at noon as the third member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

The ceremony will be held in the District Building office of Commissioner Guy Mason.

Moran was appointed yesterday by the Commissioners to complete the unexpired term of Board Member William P. Mredith, who died August 31. The term will end February 4, 1948.

Commissioner Guy Mason, who recommended Moran, said he thought a lawyer would be of "inestemable help to other members of the board, who are not lawyers."

Mason said he had personally talked to "a good many" of the 23 candidates for the post and finally concluded "Moran best fitted the bill."

"I thought he was an ideal man for the job, and the other Commissioners agreed with me," Mason declared.

Alan W. Payne, ABC Board chairman, offered Moran "condolences" on his appointment. "It's one of the dirtiest, lowest-paid jobs in the city," Payne said.

Moran refused to comment on such ABC control issues as children's drinking and "stand up" drinking at bars. "I want to go into the job with an open mind," he explained. "And I don't want to talk about the issues without giving them considerable thought."

Four Years in Navy

The 43-year-old appointee is a native of Washington, attended Catholic and Georgetown Universities, and received a law degree from the latter institution in 1929. He has been practicing law here evr since, except for four years in the United States Navy during World War II.

Part of his Navy "hitch" was spent as assistant intelligence officer in Bremen, Germany. He entered the service a lieutenant, was released as a commander.

Moran is a director of the Real Estate Title and Insurance Co. and former director of the District of Columbia Bar Association and National Capitol Bank of Washington.

Montgomery Won't Shelve Police Post

Continued existence of the $1200 a year post currently held by Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter was thus held assured. The vote against abolishing the post was a reaffirmation of previously announced policy.

Chief proponent yesterday for eliminating the post and placing the police department under direct administration of the county commissioners as a whole was Mrs. Alma Opal, Takoma Park, who has repeatedly requested such action by the commissioners.

Mrs. Opal said she based her requests on a report by the Brookings Institution in 1941 favoring the move. The issue found some support among the commissioners, but was vigorously opposed by Commissioner Sauter.

Threatened to Quit

Meeting in Rockville, the commissioners passed an ordinance regulating and licensing slaughterhouses. The ordinance calls for a $500 annual license fee and forbids their operation within 500 yards of any dwelling, school, hospital or public road.

The subject aroused some controversy when Gaithersburg residents objected to a proposed slaughterhouse in their neighborhood and asked for such an ordinance. When it was drawn up, farmers and spokesmen for farm groups opposed the ordinance, revealing they were backing a slaughterhouse already under construction.

The commissioners set October 7 at 2 p. m. for a public hearing on proposed street and sidewalk improvements near the new Hecht Co. store in Silver Spring.

Cost Put at $42,052

County Engineer Douglas Riggs estimated the cost of the street widening and improvements at $42,052 and said they would be done on a front foot benefit assessment basis with property owners sharing the cost.

The improvements had been requested by Milton Schlessinger, manager of the new store, who warned that emergency traffic and parking conditions might arise with the store's opening, tentatively set for November 1.

County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr also disclosed that negotiations with the owners of the Colonel Meed property, which is to be come a portion of the proposed 80,000-square-foot public parking lot near the store, had broken down. He said the commissioners voted to go ahead with condemnation proceedings.

County Eyes Latest in Snow Plows

Respite from the heat wave apparently turned the attention of the Prince Georges County Commissioners to winter problems yesterday. The county fathers discussed at length the need for purchasinf snow plows.

Linden Briscoe, clerk of the board, reminded the commissioners it will take at least 45 days to get delivery after the plows are ordered. He was directed to discuss types and prices with County Engineer Arthur Tayma today and report back to the board.

On a warmer subject, the commissioners agreed to reduce the bituminous base of the projected Riverdale rd.-Finn's Lane resurfacing from eight inches to six saving $17,339.70, and then let contract for the road to the James Gibbons Co. of Relay, Md. The road extends for 2¾ miles from Edmonston rd. in East Riverdale to Defense Highway at West Lanham and will go under the new Baltimore-Washington Freeway with proper access roadways.

Installation of a pedestrian controlled traffic light a New Hampshire ave. and Ray rd. to protect children attending J. Enos Ray Elementary School was urged in a communication from the Democratic Club of the 4th Precinct, Chillum District.

The commissioners granted a permit to the Chapel Oaks Volunteer Fire Department for a Hell-driver auto thrill show to be held Sunday at 58th st. and Sheriff rd. for the benefit of the firehouse rebuilding fund. The department's firehouse burned down recently.

Construction Of 4 Schools Is Advanced

Final architectural plans for four more school construction projects, aimed at reducing the number of students attending part-time classes, were approved yesterday by the Committee on Buildings, Grounds and Equipment of the District Board of Education.

Final action is expected to be taken today when the committee submits the plans drawn up by Merrell A. Coe, Municipal Architect, at a full board meeting.

Preliminary plans for two additional schools also were approved at the afternoon meeting attended by Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning, Coe, committee-members George E. C. Hayes and C. Melvin Sharpe, and other board members, Dr. Robert A. Maurer, Mrs. Velma G. Williams and John H. Wilson.

If the board accepts the committee's recommendations, Coe said that bids would be advertised "soon." This would bring the total number of construction projects open for general bidding to eight, he said.

The four approved by the committee are: the Kelley Miller Junior High School, 49th st. and Washington pl. ne., with 23 classrooms and 13 special rooms, Nalle and John Tyler elementary schools at 50th st. and Bass pl. se., and 10th and G sts. se., respectively, each with 24 classrooms, and 10 classrooms and a gymnasium added to the Taft junior high school, 18th and Perry sts. ne.

Preliminary plans, rather than final plans, were approved for additions to Hine junior high school, 7th and C sts. se., and Syphax elementary school, between N and O sts. sw.

Md. Legislators To Get Data From Sales Tax Study

Maryland State legislators will be presented with data on the working of the State sales tax when they meet in special session this fall to consider Baltimore's fiscal problems.

This was disclosed yesterday at Annapolis by Governor Lane, who said he ordered the Bureau of Revenue Estimates to make the study.

Governor Lane also announced that he would review the State's financial situation in a radio broadcast Friday at 8:30 p. m. over Station WBAL of Baltimore.

He said he would give a close account of what has taken place in Maryland fiscal affairs since he took over in January, with special attention to the sales tax, its effects on the school and road systems of the State, and prospects for the future.

Blinded Man Is Indicted in Wife's Death

Henry T. Wright, 73, of 913 Perry st. ne., was charged in the indictment with slaying his wife, Lulu Bell Wright, 49, with two shots from a .22-caliber target pistol during an argument at their home July 3.

Mrs. Wright's mother, Mrs. Maggie B. Fitzgerald, 69, was wounded by a shot in the back as she raced in front of her daughter to protect her as the firing started.

After shooting the two women, police said, Wright turned the weapon on himself, firing a slug into his left temple. He survived but lost his slight.

Police said that Mrs. Fitzgerald reported her daughter had started divorce proceedings against Wright and that he had threatened "I'll kill you before you ever live with another man."

14 Other True Bills

The grand jury returned true bills in 14 other cases, ignored charges against nine and dismissed the complaint against members of the Police Department brought by Julius Willie Clegg.

How a visitor from Peru was flim-flammed out of $3700 was described in the indictment returned against Joseph Crage, no address, charged with grand larceny.

According to police, the victim, Ricardo Elias Aparicio, with his wife, Estella, were accosted by Crage at 10th and G sts. nw., last August 1.

Crage, it was charged, represented himself as a Guatemalan. Police said he told Aparicio that Crage's father had stolen $1200 from a man in Washington many years ago and fled to South America.

Now, according to the story, the father was on his deathbed and wanting to die with a clear conscience had given Crage $1200 to return to the alleged victim with instructions to give the money to a hospital if the man could not be found. Also, Crage was quoted as saying, he had $2000 additional to give to anyone who would help him in his mission.

At this point, it was said, another man joined Crage and Aparicio and after a conversation in Spanish advised the latter to draw a large sum from the bank as evidence of good faith in the deal.

Aparicio said he drew out $3500, that together with $200 from his pocket, and what was represented as $1200 allegedly from Crage was placed in a handkerchief and deposited in Mrs. Aparicio's handbag.

The group agreed to meet an hour later. Before the appointed time, while shopping, Mrs. Aparicio opened her handbag. The handkerchief contained nothing but old newspaper cuttings. Neither Crage nor the other man was seen again, according to the complainants.

Group Named To Study Fish By-Products

Baltimore, Sept. 16 (AP).—Chairman John E. Clark of the board of natural resources today named five men associated with Maryland's fishing industry to serve as a committee to study requests for use of waste materials.

Those named were John T. Handy, jr., of Crisfield, William Woodfield of Galesville, John Harrison, Theodore Miller of Rock Hall and Gilbert Moore, executive secretary of the Maryland Commercial Fisherman's Association.

The committee will work with the department of research and education to evolve a program designed to divert fish waste materials into economically profitable uses.

Dr. R. V. Truitt, department director who suggested the committee to Clark, said the waste material thrown away in Maryland annually exceeds the tonnage of fish actually eaten.

He has estimated that in addition to millions of pounds of shell fish by-products not being salvaged, "about 10 million pounds of finfish waste materials of high potential value in fine chemical manufacture, pharamaceuticals, foods and a variety of other uses are being thrown away."

Truitt said a number of inquiries have been received regarding uses for the by-prdouects. The committee will handle these inquiries.

Mrs. Olivet Joins Husband In Death After 10 Hours

Dr. and Mrs. William E. Olivet, of Annapolis, Md., were separated by death for only ten hours yesterday.

Anne Arundel County Medical Examiner Dr. E. R. Ritchings said last night that Mrs. Olivet, wife of the retired professor of modern languages at Annapolis Naval Academy, died in her sleep early yesterday from shock over the fatal heart attack of her husband, Monday night.

The couple had been married 45 years a son-in-law said.

They will be buried side by side in the Naval Academy Cemetery, Annapolis, following double funeral services at 2 p. m. Friday, at the Naval Academy Chapel.

Dr. Olivet, 71, who met his wife in church work in Washington at the turn of the century, collapsed while listening to the radio after Monday night's dinner at the couple's home. He was pronounced dead shortly after arrival of the physician.

Mrs. Olivet, 70, the former Harriet Foulke of Washington, was prostrated by grief and retired to her bed shortly afterwards, friends said. A daytime maid for the family and a neighbor who stayed to comfort her were present when she died.

She was pronounced dead at 5 a. m., yesterday, by Dr. Ritchings, who said death was due to "shock brought on by the sudden death of her husband."

The couple had one daughter, Francine, who was summoned from the home of her husband, Alvord John Greenacre, on the staff of the Naval War College, at Newport, R. I.

Dr. Olivet, who taught Spanish and French at the Naval Academy for 38 years before retiring in 1942, was born March 18, 1876, in Geneva, Switzerland. His family migrated to Argentina when he was a boy.

He came to United States as a young man to become an instructor at the Berlitz School. Before he left the school of languages he had become director of its Baltimore, Md., branch.

In 1903, a naturalized citizen, he was appointed an instructor in modern languages at the Naval Academy, remaining there with the exception of one year's leave to visit Argentina, until his retirement in 1942.

Mrs. Olivet, who was born in Washington, June 3, 1877, met her husband in Washington in connection with work for the Methodist Church. They were married here on August 30, 1902.

After Dr. Olivet's retirement, the elderly couple continued to live in their Annapolis home, and both kept up their active interest in church work.

Dorothy Jane Lowe

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Sept. 16.—Dorothy Jane Lowe, 21, was found dead at her home yesterday from a bullet wound in the heart. State Trooper L. W. Kelly of the Martinsburg post said the wound was self-inflicted, and Dr. G. P. Morison, Jefferson County coroner, held an inquest was unnecessary.

Troper Kelly said the girl was found in the living room by her father who heard a shot and went to investigate. The bullet was from a 22-calibre rifle. Kelly said a farewell note was found, addressed to her mother, but the contents were not made public.

Surviving are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Lowe, five brothers and two sisters. Services are to be held here tomorrow.

REA Chapter, Disabled American Veterans, has chartered the S.S. Mt. Vernon, Wilson line boat, for a cruise Saturday, it was announced yesterday. The Exotic Look

Butterflies Flutter on Milady's Hat

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

WASHINGTON'S first batch of "openings," while fun, sartorially speaking, were scarcely snazzy. From the feminine point of view there are few things less appetizing than an escort in a limp seersucker suit. The theaters and night clubs are full of them. And while a woman's mind is filled with such fripperies as squeezed waistlines and sheer black stockings it's depressing to see the object she hopes to snare looking so unattractive!

... Wearing her butterfly hat
ESTELLE WINWOOD

Wearing Butterflies

AT THE "Lady Windermere's Fan" premiere, gals in the audience were fascinated by Estelle Winwood's hat. It's a yellow straw skimmer, period of course, haloed by a flock of butterflies quivering delicately six inches or so above the crown. It was whipped up in John Frederic's Hollywood salon—not by Cecil Beaton, who designed the other fabulous costumes. The butterflies are hand painted, plastic, and flitting among them are thumbnail size, very realistic flies and a zeppelin shaped yellow bird. Though Miss Winwood pins it atop a red wig, the contraption's wonderfully becoming to almost anyone—we know because we tried!

Henderson Chooses Dancing

THE SAME NIGHT, in the Statler's Embassy Room, Ted Straeter, straight from an engagement in Manhattan's Capitol Theater, opened with Morton Downey as singing star.

The evening's big moment was when Downey, who wriggles his legs as he plays and sings, gave an extra wiggle and two piano legs collapsed. Some of the orchestra boys had to drop their horns, bolster the music box with their shoulders.

Outstanding terpsichorean expert was chunky, cigar smoking Leon Henderson, who dipped about with his daughter. Queried about his footwork, the former OPA head flipped a la Kravchenko, "I chose dancing—I've quit economics, there's fun and no headaches in a lusty rhumba!"

On California's Riviera

NOW THAT Fiesta Week's over in Santa Barbara, Washingtonians have been trickling back from California. Among the vanguard were the Robert Woods Blisses who, after a brief stopover, brushed off Washington for Europe; Mrs. Reggie Foster, daughter of the late Senator Hoar, and Mrs. Bruce Hopper, whose Harvard professor husband during war and postwar years has been dizzily globe circling with Gen. Carl Spaatz.

Santa Barbara has been gay as the old days on the Riviera. Even Alexander Kirk, our former Ambassador to Italy, emerged from his Colorado hermitage to visit his sister, Mrs. Ruddock. When Alex Kirk, tall, suave, heir to a fantastic soap fortune and one of our most experienced diplomats, announced he'd retired for good—no one believed it. But he's still living in Colorado mountain fastnesses in what he claims is a "cabin."

As he once owned Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean's Wisconsin Avenue mansion and, in Rome, rented such cute shacks as the Barberini Palace, chances are the Kirk Kabin has 75 air-conditioned rooms crammed with priceless objets d'art.

Sirens and Poets

HARRY BUTCHER, who authored a best seller on Eisenhower, is a permanent Santa Barbarian and running a most successful radio station cozily called KIST. Ganna Walska, the Polish siren, is there, too. She's still slim, handsome and bejeweled. The would-be opera star who married millions via husbands Cochran and McCormick had trouble shaking her latest—a young, American-born, self-styled Buddha priest, who upped and sued her for maintenance!

On the less exotic side are the Alfred Noyeses, the former British Poet Laureate, who came to the United States on a lecture tour, decided to remain. Recently the Austin Strongs sold Miraflores. That's the place where Robert Louis Stevenson had a small cabin, wrote many of his outstanding works. Years ago, RLS gave Mrs. Strong, then a little girl, his birthday. Remember?

The movie stars whisk down to stay at San Ysidro, a glamorous series of guest houses owned by Ronald Colman. The slightly less lavishly heeled stay at the Mirasol, a charming hotel whose main part once was the home of the Albert Herters, parents of Massachusetts Congressman Christian Herter. Albert Herter was a well-known artist and some of his murals decorate the Mirasol.

Of interest to svelte-line ladies is Washington's de luxe exerciser, Hungarian born Sheposh. Sheposh follows the Blisses almost wherever they go, and has set up shop in the private gymnasium of Chicago's Mrs. Stanley McCormick.

Indian Embassy Party

The Charge d' Affaires of India and Mrs. B. R. Sen will entertain at cocktails at the Embassy this afternoon in honor of the delegates to the International Statistical Conferences. Guests have been invited for 5:30 o'clock.

On Party Calendar

IN HER apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Hugh Butler entertained at tea for wives of delegates to the International Statistical Conferences. The tea honored Mrs. Morris Kendall and Mrs. Hector Leake, both of London, England.

Among the guests were Mrs. Julius Klein, Mrs. India Edwards, Mrs. W. H. S. Stevens, Mrs. D. A. McPherson, Mrs. J. A. de Force, Miss Kay Falvey, Mrs. Elmer W. Pehrson, Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, Mrs. Thalia Woods, and Mrs. Mildred W. Wells.

Entertains Couple

CHARLES THOMAS, jr., entertained at cocktails and supper last evening on the lawn of Windy Knoll Farm in honor of Miss Francine Whitten and her fiance, William Lewis MacCracken. Members of the bridal party and other guests were present.

Miss Isabella Hagner and Randall H. Hagner, jr., attended and also Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bowie.

Betrothed

Miss Carla Jane Small, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Keith I. Small, announce her engagement to Randolph Warren Willis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Willis of University Park, Md. An April wedding is planned

Pudding Combines Fruits

2 tart apples, peeled
3 firm bananas, peeled
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt
3 cups soft bread crumbs
3 tablespoons melted shortening

Use all-yellow bananas. Slice apples and cut bananas into ½ inch pieces. Combine fruit, sugar, cinnamon, and salt. Mix bread crumbs with butter. Place alternate layers of crumbs and fruit in well-buttered baking pan, using crumbs for top and bottom layers. Cover pan and bake about 40 minutes in moderate oven or until apples are tender. Uncover. Bake 5 minutes extra to brown the crumbs. Serve hot with cream, sweetened whipped cream, or fruit sauce.

Exercise Waistline To Be Slim

By Ida Jean Kain

OVERWEIGHT begins at 35, but it doesn't really show up until around 40. And the big difference in a woman's figure during the middle years is in the middle of the figure.

The interlacing abdominal muscles get soft and flabby, and little by little the figure sags. The muscles at the sides of the waist also become flabby, and fat begins to form around them. Then that nice slim waist of youth takes on the thickness which is the mark of the middle-age spread.

Muscles Give Way

Of course you may have taken on weight too, perhaps 12 to 15 pounds, but it's the thickness through the middle more than the added pounds, that spoil the figure. Your waist may easily have expanded 5 or 6 inches from what it was a few years ago. It's called the middle-age spread only because it comes along at that time, but actually it can't be blamed on age. It's lack of stiffening in the muscles, coupled with indifferent posture. Did you ever notice that figures seem to slip and slump at the same time? But it isn't a middle-age figure you should worry about, but a middle-aged feeling.

But first, let me make one thing clear. Strength of muscles is not health, exactly, but strong muscles in the middle of the figure hold the organs to their proper position, and functioning properly, you feel young and fit and happy. The muscles exercise a quickening power over the organs. Here is a good beginning exercise, and it's very easy.

Position: Sit on the floor with back pressed against the wall . . . of course the legs and feet will be out in front on floor. Now all there is to the exercise is to flatten the back against the wall, by pulling up strongly with the lower abdominal muscles. As you pull up and in, this contracts the muscles of the buttocks. Hold this strong up-pull for a few seconds, relax and repeat. In this position the lumbar curve is straightened and the pelvis correctly tilted.

To Restore Tone

That helps to give you the feel of middle-muscle firmness and what right sitting posture can do toward restoring tone to these muscles.

To progress in that exercise, slide out from the wall, bend knees, and keep soles of feet on floor . . . now contract and relax the same sets of muscles, putting the emphasis on the up-pull, more than the in-pull.

Follow through with this strong up-pull while sitting in a chair and you're well on your way to banishing the middle spread and the middle-age feeling.

Cheese Cookery

Moselle Martindale, at right, likes to assist her friends in choosing the "right hat." Here she shows a friend how to wear a jaunty cocoa brown felt which is adorned with antique jet embroidery

Wheelchair Hobby

Little Girl's Doll Sewing Grows to Hat Designing Job

Steel braces on her back and legs and two canes enable Moselle Martindale, a victim of infantile paralysis in childhood, to walk. They are also responsible for what was once a hobby and is now a vocation—hat designing.

"When you can't move around as well as other people, you learn to do something with your hands," explains Moselle, who lives on a farm near Philomont, Va., and conjures up ideas for hats while gazing at the mists that play hide and seek in the Blue Ridge mountains.

Began on Dolls

Afflicted at the age of 7, Moselle began making doll's clothes when other little girls were flying around on skates and bicycles. Later she studied music, then commercial art, finally decided she got the most pleasure from designing clothes.

"Because it provides me with an excuse for seeing people," she says.

Moselle prefers making hats and likes to think of them as collection pieces. She buys some of her materials in New York, but whenever possible uses pieces of antique braid, lace and jet beads which she acquires by raiding the attics of her Virginia friends.

History Inspires

For inspiration Moselle spends hours pouring over history books and ancient fashion magazines and has discovered that there is little that is new under the fashion sun. Her current collection of hats are based on berets worn by men in medieval times and by early Virginia planters.

Moselle keeps her hands and mind so busy she never gets time to feel sorry for herself.

Banana Dish

Try baked bananas. Place whole, peeled bananas in a well-buttered baking dish, brush with melted butter, sprinkle with salt. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes or until bananas are fork tender. Choose all-yellow or slightly green-tipped bananas to taste best when cooked.

The Boss and I

When I am sitting at my desk . . . As busy as can be . . . The boss is never there to watch . . . Or be aware of me . . . And if I do a job that should . . . Be given special praise . . . It never seems to reach his ears . . . Or captivate his gaze . . . But if I take a second off . . . To make a side remark . . . He always happens to be there . . . With his tremendous bark . . . He notices my least mistake . . . Or if I slow my pace . . . And every time he calls me I . . . Am at some other place . . . And that explains the sorry part . . . Of all my working days . . . And why I never have the nerve . . . To ask him for a raise.

How to Improve Dishwashing

Don't pack a dishpan full of dishes and expect to come out without a few casualties. A few at a time means cleaner and better dishes and fewer chipped ones.

Even if you do not have time to scald all your dishes, take time to scald the silverware. It not only keeps the silver in good condition but is an added protection against the spreading of mouth germs, colds, etc.

For Quick Meals

A jar of dried beef on the shelf is a life-saver for emergency meals. Try a casserole of boiled noodles, shredded dried beef and cheese sauce. Good for lunch, dinner or supper.

French Original Frocks Have American Debut In Capital Preview

By Peggy Preston

WASHINGTON had a "fashion first" yesterday—had it before New York, Dallas, Hollywood or any of the cities that lay claim to the style crown on this side of the Atlantic.

Members of the press were invited by a local store to preview its collection of French originals purchased at the August showings of the famous French designers, Christian Dior, Balenciaga, Balmain and Jacques Fath. Considering the time element involved, this is an unusual event in itself. But the big news of the collection is that it is made entirely of American-loomed fabrics, flown to Paris for that express purpose. Then, the originals completed, sent by plane to Washington.

Heretofore, French originals reaching this country have been made of native fabrics. Here, then, is an inkling that American-loomed satins, taffeta, bengalines and brocades may vie with those of the Old World.

In this particular instance the step was taken by a Washington store in cooperation with an American fabrics firm. Perhaps, in future years, others will adopt a similar policy.

Time to Review the Models

IT HAS been so many years since French originals have been exported in any great numbers that it may be well to review the process by which these wares reach our stores. American buyers, attending the openings in Paris, buy gowns for approximately $400 or $500 each. These are brought back to this country, copied in a modified form by local designers and turned out in several sizes by manufacturers for the respective stores. We, the customers, purchase them at prices vastly lower than the cost of the original.

Nine originals were shown yesterday. They are already in New York where they will be reproduced by a manufacturer without the usual modifications. Although the shipment was insured for $7000, the dresses that return to the store in October will retail for under $100 each.

Dior Is Spectacular

MOST spectacular of the collection were the creations of the fabulous Dior. Here were slim afternoon dresses with the much-touted "derriere de Paris" (which means a draped shape in the rear to us). Sometimes he combined the "derriere" with a huge taffeta bow in front and the result was nothing less than terrific. Another startling dress was of black bengaline with a draped back and flounced front called "Rivoli." There are three of his originals in the collection.

Balenciaga was represented by a dressy afternoon dress in rayon and worsted bengaline featuring a full-bloused peplum over a narrow skirt. From Jacques Fath there was a tailored bengaline dress with stitched peplum and full skirt and a bouffant satin and grosgrain stripe full-skirted evening dress.

Balmain had a slim bustle-back brown bengaline evening gown and a stunning brocade with his distinctive "whistle silhouette" evening jacket in matching fabric.

Paris Comes to Washington

THESE French originals arrived in Washington yesterday direct from Paris and were shown to members of the press at the local store which purchased them during the August openings. It is the first collection of its kind ever to be made entirely of American-loomed fabrics. Exact reproductions will be available here in October. Above, a typical slim-waisted, hip-draped dress by Balenciaga in black bengaline

ONE of the most wearable in the collection was this tailored dress of elephant grey bengaline (right) designed by Jacques Fath. Stitched peplum over a full skirt gives the effect of a suit-dress. Mr. Fath made his fame originally with unusual sports fashions, now prefers tailored clothes

CHRISTIAN DIOR, the most talked-about designer today, is represented by three costumes in the collection. Above is one of his most startling. It features an elaborate back drape and a huge taffeta bow in front. A waist "minimizer" is essential with this dress

Misses Moore and Jacobs Are Brides in Week's Ceremonies

Miss Dorothy Jean Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Moore of Elmwood, Nebr., and Verne Wesley Gibbs, son of Mrs. Frederick B. Hyder and the late O. H. Gibbs, were married Monday in the Georgetown Lutheran Church. The 4 p. m. ceremony was read by the Rev. Harold E. Beatty and the bride was given in marriage by Fred A. Rohrs, uncle of the bridegroom. A reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rohrs followed the ceremony.

The bride wore an afternoon gown of dusty pink with dove gray accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses and forget-me-nots. Mrs. Robert R. Rohrs, who was matron of honor, was in aqua crepe and wore a corsage of talisman roses.

After a honeymoon in the Pocono Mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs will live in Washington. The bride attended the University of Omaha and was a member of Pi Omega Pi Sorority. The bridegroom attended Creighton University, Omaha, and is now attending George Washington.

Kennedy—Jacobs

The Ryland Methodist Church was the setting for the wedding Monday of Miss Marian Louise Jacobs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jacobs, to Thomas Walton Kennedy, son of Mrs. Jessie Brett Kennedy, also of Washington. The Rev. C. Lewis Robson officiated at the ceremony, held at 4 p. m.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of candlelight satin trimmed with embroidery and seed pearls. Her veil of illusion fell from a matching coronet of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis.

Miss Lois Marie Blick, her only attendant, was gowned in pale rose marquisette and carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium. She wore similar flowers in her hair.

Best man was Harry Bond and ushers were Kenneth Curles and Burtus Gainey.

American Aid to France Continues Relief Work

The workroom will be open three times a week—Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. The organization will be glad to have old volunteers call and delighted to have new ones.

Debutante and Mother Visit in New York

Miss Claire Delattre-Seguy, one of this year's debutantes, has gone to New York for a week's visit, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Jean Delattre-Seguy. The deb will make her bow at a tea at her home in Georgetown on December 20.

The Delattre-Seguy household has recently been the scene of a family reunion. Mrs. Delattre-seguy's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Robert MacFadden, arrived from New York last Friday with their three young daughters, Dinah, Cary and Abby.

Their visit was occasioned by two important family events. Friday evening Mr. MacFadden and Claire celebrated their birthdays together, and on Sunday little Abby MacFadden was christened in Christ's Church, Georgetown.

Mrs. Delattre-Seguy will stay with the MacFaddens, who have returned to New York, and Claire will visit her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bartlett. The debutante will return next week in time to start college at American University. Mrs. Delattre-Seguy will remain in time to start college at American University. Mrs. Delattre-Seguy will remain in New York until October.

Rings on Their Fingers

The engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Miss Nell Ruth Beyer, to Ensign Kirk Crothers Miller, jr., USN, has been announced by Capt. and Mrs. Edward Flood Beyer of New Orleans, La., and Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Miller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Crothers Miller of Washington.

The wedding will take place Saturday, September 27, at St. Patrick's Church, Brooklyn.

Miss Beyer attended Mount St. Vincent College and the Katherine Gibbs School, New York. Ensign Miller attended Western High School and Randle's Preparatory School in Washington and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy, class of 1946.

Kern—Pettit

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Howard Pettit have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Deane Kern, to Ian Graeme Barbour, son of Dr. and Mrs. George B. Barbour of Cincinnati, Ohio. The wedding will take place at Christ Church, Georgetown, late in November.

Miss Kern was graduated from Duke University, class of '47. Mr. Barbour was graduated from Swarthmore College and received his master's degree in physics from Duke University.

Nancy Joy Clinton Engaged to Marry

Mr. and Mrs. George D. Clinton of Washington have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Nancy Joy Clinton, to George S. Pever, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Pever of Washington.

The announcement was made last evening on the birthday anniversary of the bride-elect. Miss Clinton was graduated from Roosevelt High School, class of 1946, and Mr. Pever attended schools in Cleveland, Ohio.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Your Questions On Homemaking

I recently bought a solid maple bedroom suite for our basement apartment. The drawers have swollen and are difficult to open. I have tried putting soap on the runners but it didn't help. What do you suggest? M. A. W.

Since soap didn't help, it seems likely that the drawers are so swollen by basement dampness that sandpapering or planing will be necessary. Of course, when the heat is turned on this winter, they may dry out and fit perfectly. However, I'm sure you don't want to struggle with their sticking until then. So find out whether the sticking is at the top, bottom, or sides (usually the place that sticks is smoother and shinier than other surfaces) and go to work with sandpaper or a plane, whichever is most convenient. Take special care in working on the front edge of the drawer, where it is likely to show. Work on the slant, away from the front, so that the outside edge remains at its original edge even though the inside edge is lowered.

1. We have an oft-used but picturesque brick fireplace we'd like to clean up and rejuvenate. Have you any ideas as to cleaning brick?

2. Do you think it would be advisable to wash Venetian blinds made of cardboard strips? E. C. A.

1. If your fireplace is stained by smoke, scrub it with a strong solution of tri-sodium phosphate and a scrubbing brush. On the more stubborn stains, it may be necessary to use steel wool and scouring powder of mechanic's handsoap containing sand. Be sure to rinse the bricks very thoroughly after cleaning so that a white film won't be left on them.

2. Washing these cardboard blinds seems inadvisable. They would probably warp, and might even disintegrate. It would be better to use the dough type of wallpaper cleaner. It may be necessary to take the blinds down and lay them on a table to clean them thoroughly.

I am living in a large apartment hotel. Will you please tell me what is the right amount of tipping to be done? We have daily maid service, is it necessary to tip her weekly or monthly? Is a 10-cent tip enough to give when a small package or a letter is delivered to the apartment? R. J.

Fifty cents to a dollar a week should be sufficient for the maid's tip, either weekly or monthly as you prefer. Ten to 15 cents should be enough for delivering the letter or small package. Tenants of large apartment hotels frequently give Christmas presents in cash of from $5 to $10 to the servants who have served them during the year.

To E. G. S., L. W. J., W. R. J., R. W., E. A. L. and D. P. W., all of whom have written in recently regarding musty odors in mattresses and upholstery: Drying these articles thoroughly in the open air and sunshine is about the only way to get rid of the mustiness. Of course, that's pretty difficult in humid weather. Take advantage of every hot, sunny day. If the sun will fade the upholstery, put it in the shade of a porch or under the trees to air. Oil of wintergreen is sometimes recommended for spraying on musty mattresses. This only obscures the musty smell, but does not make it less unpleasant. There are also deodorant preparations (sold in the household goods section of a local department store) which can be sprayed in the air and will make musty odors less noticeable in a room. The mustiness will probably disappear as soon as dryer fall weather comes, or when you start using the furnace and the furniture gets a chance to dry out thoroughly. If it doesn't go away then, it may be necessary to have mattresses and upholstery renovated and new filling put in by a commercial company.

Young Wife Asks How to Strive Righteously Against Mother-in-Law's Crony, a Malicious Gossip Who Has Recently Turned Guns on Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is occasioned by a shallow, rather malicious woman who has spent her life promulgating slanderous gossip about others. Recently she has fixed on me as the target for many of her attacks, which is causing me considerable distress.

I think I understand the reason for her attacks; but unfortunately I cannot figure a cure. She very much wanted my husband to marry into her family; and when I came into the community less than a year ago and shortly thereafter became engaged to him, she took his demarche very personally.

Now she is venting her ensuing resentment on me by circulating distorted information about me. And, as it happens, she is my mother-in-law's closest friend, the one in whom my mother-in-law confides what she knows of our personal business,—since aside from her husband and son (to whom I am married) she has no relatives in this community.

She Isn't Close To Mother-in-Law

IF I HAD my way, I would have nothing more to do with this hypocritical family friend. I would decline her invitations to dinner, which she still issues while talking so maliciously. But this would pain my husband's mother, who is very formal and conventional, whereas I am just the opposite.

Things might be easier if we were closer, but as it is, we are very different, although I'm doing my best to lessen the gap. She has been away for several months; hence knows nothing of the present issue; but she will be home shortly and I would appreciate any advice leading to a right solution. I have taken my father-in-law into my confidence and am sure he will go to bat for me. F. P.

Problem Isn't What She Avows

DEAR F. P.: Whatever your problem, primarily it isn't occasioned by the old battle axe whose mission in life is floating gossip. More likely, it has to do with making a good many mistakes in the field of diplomacy, after marrying into the community while still a comparatively stranger and newcomer.

It may be that in excess of youthful complacency at grabbing off a huband esteemed a good catch by the natives, you flung your head too high at certain rivals-of-sorts whom you had frustrated, as you learned of their existence,—the old battle axe included.

Also possibly in your first flush of triumph you reckoned your mother-in-law among the vanquished, and perhaps generally, in a shortsighted display of brash insouciance, incited bad feeling in feminine key-quarters that is beginning to pool up against you to a degree that you find startling and frightening.

Wise to Correct Her Own Mistakes

IN ANY EVENT, the curiously evasive gist and undertone of your letter suggest guilt-tinged disturbance of mind, as if you were walking on eggs to avoid touching confessional material that might belie your implication of injured innocence.

As for the old battle axe, bosom confidante of your mother-in-law, she must on the contrary feel sure of her ground, to be publicly spouting acid at you from a private pipeline. Probably her premise is that she's pleading the mother-in-law's case against you. Your very tenuous, defensive and shaken references to your distant relations with the latter tend to corroborate that conjecture.

Since you haven't put your cards on the table, you cannot expect a straight-on constructive answer. The best I can say is to honestly face your own mistakes, whatever they've been, and systematically try to correct them, without holding grudges against those whose resentment you thoughtlessly provoked in earlier season. And for daily help in this regard, my advice is to become a faithful student of "The Sermon on the Mount," as interpreted by Emmet Fox. M. H.

Maryland Farmers' Cash Income for 6 Months of '47 Tops All Records Despite Short Crops

By Fred Zusy
Associated Press Reporter

The 1947 harvest finds Maryland farmers apparently headed toward an all-time record high in cash income.

Although receipts are up, overall production, affected by a cold and wet spring, is, with a few exceptions, below last year's crop, which had fine growing weather.

A record 1946 tobacco and near-record 1947 tomato crop disappointed growers of these commodities with lower prices than expected. (Maryland tobacco is sold the year following the harvest.)

But prices of other farm products went up. Livestock and related items such as dairy foods, poultry and eggs, gained about 30 per cent.

Md. Receipts $90,841,000

Total cash receipts to Free State farmers for the first six months this year total $90,941,000, against $75,825,000 for the corresponding period last year. This includes $68,580,000 for livestock and products, and $22,261,000 for crops.

The top war year—1945—showed $171,232,000 cash receipts for farm marketings.

Maryland is second in the Nation this year in production of late summer watermelons with an estimated yield of 2,500,000 melons of a total of 9,694,000 through the country. Only Indiana is larger.

The Free State is third in summer lima beans, with 104,000 bushels, and tied for third with Florida in production of snap beans for processing, with 13,600 tons. Early fall spinach production of 75,000 bushels is fourth in the Nation.

The State is fourth, too, in tomatoes and sweet corn for processing. The 1947 tomato yield is estimated at 239,000 tons, and sweet corn at 82,000 tons.

The tomato production is below the 10-year average of 240,000 tons, but the yield per acre this year is figured at 5.2 tons, against a 10-year average of 4.2. Sweet corn is above the 10-year average of 77,700 tons and the yield per acre this year is 2.3 tons compared to 2.1 over the 10 years to 1945.

The State's apple crop slumped to 884,00 bushels, against 1,872,000 last year. This was above the 702,000bushels of 1945. Sizes are reported large, however, begins September 20, a week later than usual.

The peach crop is also down from 646,000 bushels last year to 398,000. The main harvest has just been completed, also a week late.

The Irish potato yield was 141 bushels per acre, compared to 132 in 1946 and 103 for the 10 years through 1945. The crop is below last year's production of sweet potatoes, also is down, although the yield per acre is over the 10-year average.

Some Tobacco Fired

Hot, dry weather caused some firing of type 32 tobacco in Southern Maryland and the estimate of this year's crop is 31-300,00 pounds, far below the 1946 crop. The yield is figured at 725 pounds an acre, against 900 last year.

The Eastern Shore tomato harvest used a considerable amount of migrant seasonal labor which the Agriculture Department reported as generally adequate nationally.

In a separate report on eggs, the Agricultural Department listed Maryland production as 379 million for the first eight months against 382 million for the same period last year.

The 1940 census showed Maryland with 42,110 farms, covering 4,197,827 acres with a value for land and buildings of 273 million dollars.

McMurray Quits As Presbyterian Stated Clerk

Winchester, Va., Sept. 16.—The Rev. J. A. McMurray, D.D., Winchester, has resigned as stated clerk of the Presbyterian Synod of Virginia, a post he has held since 1920. The resignation of the 81-year-old cleric was tendered at the annual meeting of the synod in Richmond.

Dr. Thomas Hooper of Culpeper was chosen to succeed to the position, which has been held by only two persons in the last 77 years.

Appalachian Peach Crop Tops Average

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 16.—The Appalachian peach-producing section (Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia), with an estimated production of nearly four million bushels, turned out good-sized peaches that were generally of excellent quality.

R. M. Peterson, in charge of the field office here of the USDA Production and Marketing Administration, made the analysis today in a review of the peach season, for which his office issued daily production and market reports for the first time.

Shipping point prices fluctuated considerably during the Appalachian peach season. U. S. No. 1 Elbertas 2 inches and up opened at $2-$2.25 per bushel in the Roanoke section but within a week were selling mostly at $3.25. A few days later the market weakened to $3 and remained at that figure until September 3 when some stock sold as low as $2.15. However, the market recovered quickly and most good firm fruit brought $3 for the remainder of the Chambersburg season.

Principal primary destination for peaches from the Appalachian belt for the season from August 13 to September 2 were: Albany, N. Y., 8 cars; Boston, 60; Bridgeport, Conn., 8; Cleveland, Ohio, 9; Detroit, Mich., 21; Hagerstown, Md., 63; Newark, N. J., 8; New Haven, Conn., 21; New York City, 150; Philadelphia, 25; Pittsburgh, 11; Potomac Yards, Va., 174; Rochester, N. Y., 10; Somerville, Mass., 17, and Syracuse, N. Y., 18. The report, tagged incomplete, showed 748 cars shipped.

Heaviest shipping day from the belt was August 22, when an even 100 cars were dispatched—97 from Virginia and 3 from Maryland. A total of 77 was sent on August 21 and 75 on August 20.

A total of terminal prices for the period showed New York paying a top of $3.25-$4.50 on August 26, $3.75-$4.25 on September 8, $3.00-$4.25 on August 27. Philadelphia market top prices included $3.50-$4.00 on August 22, $3.25-$4.00 on August 21, $2.57-$3.75 September 2, and $2.00-$3.75 September 8.

Issuance of daily reports on the apple market from the belt started today from Peterson's office, probably to continue until late October. The apple crop is short, an estimated 40 per cent, in this belt. There is no heavy current movemennt at the moment, and won't be until Grimes Golden are moved in volume.

First Half of '47

Va. Farm Incomes Jump 37%

By Frank E. Taylor
Associated Press Reporter

Virginia was among the top States in the South in the percentage gain of cash farm receipts during the first six months of 1947 over the same period last year.

Agriculture Department farm income figures show Virginia farmers received $160,519,000 from farm marketings for January through June, this year, as compared with $116,961,000 for these six months last year, a gain of 37 per cent.

The department said income from cattle and hogs showed an increase in all South Atlantic States during June, especially in Virginia, Georgia and Florida.

Virginia receipts from livestock and products were $91,741,000 during the first six months of 1947, as compared with $71,151,000 for the first half of 1946. Receipts from crops were $68,778,000, as compared with $45,810,000 for the first half last year.

Among Southern States, Virginia was outranked in total receipts by North Carolina, with $175,938,000; Florida, with $221,784,000; Kentucky, with $257,626,000; Tennessee, $200,904,000; Arkansas, $161,670,000; and Texas, $674,797,000.

None of these States, however, showed as large a percentage gain as Virginia. Florida cash receipts for the period were less than for the first half of 1946.

Preliminary estimates of cash receipts for the United States for the first eight months of 1947 were approximately $17,400,000, or 21 per cent greater than for the same months last year.

Venue Change Asked in Jail Death Trial

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 16 (AP).—Two officers charged with manslaughter after a fight at the Wicomico County jail asked today that they be tried outside Maryland's First Judicial Circuit and pleaded they could not get a fair hearing on the lower Eastern Shore.

The petitions were filed on behalf of Sergt. J. J. Harbaugh of the Maryland State Police and John W. Turner, night turnkey at the jail. The Wicomico County grand jury indicted them on the manslaughter charges last week in the death July 27 of Milton H. Jones, 31-year-old automobile dealer.

Harbaugh had arrested Jones outside Salisbury on a drunken driving charge, and a fight developed as they were being taken to the jail atop the courthouse in an elevator operated by Turner. Jones died later at Peninsula General Hospital.

The petitions for a change of venue recited that the defendants could not get a fair trial in Wicomico, Somerset, Dorchester or Worcester County because newspaper publicity and other factors "have put the public in a vengeful mood."

They set out that an overflow crowd turned up for a "public hearing" on the case before the charges were filed and said "the feeling was such that the slightest untoward incident would have turned it into a mob."

Harbaugh's petition said such a feeling was unjustified but still existed.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Here's Why Holes Are Drilled in Our Highways

The other day we used S. M. S.'s query about the holes in Mount Vernon Memorial hwy. Several alert District Liners explain them very fully.

Howard Crumley of 4320 S. 35th st., Arlington, Va., writes that after the boulevard was built it began to settle. The holes were drilled to permit a pumping machine to force a "fill" material beneath the surface.

W. C. Reamy, jr., of 1318 21st st. South, Arlington, Va., describes the process in detail. He says that the fill mixture is 95 per cent loam and 5 per cent Portland cement, with enough water added to make a consistency like that of pancake batter.

This mixture is forced beneath the pavement by a special pump known as a Mud Jack.

Lester Harlow of 4215 S. 32d rd., Arlington, Va., explains why the process is necessary. Portions of Mount Vernon Memorial hwy. are built over marshy tide flats and these sections have a tendency to settle.

The mixture which is periodically pumped under the road compensates for the settling, and prevents the highway from cracking. Similar holes can be noticed in the roadway near the Highway Bridge, and various other places around town.

(Didn't I tell you District Liners know everything?)

TAKE A BOW, MARY; YOU'VE BEEN UNMASKED

We can stop wondering about the identity of the lady at Garfield Hospital who gives a present to every baby born there.

She's been unmasked by Mrs. Le Roy Robins of 4441 47th st. nw., whose doctor-husband used to be on the staff at Garfield.

The donor is Mary E. Ryan, who's stationed at the hospital's information desk. Her friends tell me that she spends much of her spare time shopping for presents and fixing up engaging little cards, ribbons, etc.

(Incidentally, our only clue was "she's Irish." It wasn't very definite, but apparently quite accurate.)

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

We have to make the best of life;
Mistakes aren't helped by fretting.
What I regret the most is time
I've wasted in regretting.
Jay Aitch.

BOOK REVIEW

Postage stamps carried in pockets and purses have a nasty habit of sticking together. So, once again, necessity has given birth to invention.

Handy "stamp books" designed to prevent such annoyance are being given to patrons by two local shops—Adler's, at 1305 G st. nw., and the Caledonia Shop, at 1419 Wisconsin ave. nw.

The books are slightly larger than a match folder, but not as thick. Their pages are made of tissue paper, folded at the bottom to prevent stamps from falling out.

UNKINDEST CUT

An item yesterday told of my plea for my vanished scissors, and of all the strange pairs that had been "returned" to me by colleagues with guilty consciences.

Now my own scissors are back, too. A girl in the office handed them over with the remark:

"So long as you're going to open a scissors store, you might as well have a complete stock."

ADD NAMES

Anne Harris of 4514 15th st. nw. has a wonderful name to add to our collection.

Dr. Charles W. Shuffle of 2025 Eye st. nw. is a podiatrist.

Film Work Looks Tough to Miner

New York.—Louis B. Mayer had a conference in Hollywood with Earl St. John, of the J. Arthur Rank organization, and they discussed Britain's newest tax measures against American films. St. John explained that this step was necessitated by Britain's crisis . . . "To put it into movie terms," said Mayer, "in all the movie scripts up till now there are lines like 'His word's as good as the Bank of England's.' Well, don't lose that."

LABOR DEPT.: David Wayne of "Finian's Rainbow" and Joseph Cotten were at the Pathe Studios in New York doing some scenes for Dave Selznick's "Portrait of Jenny." One of the visitors that day was a Pennsylvania coal miner whose brother was a prop man on the set . . . The air-conditioning had broken down, and Wayne and Cotten gasped in the summer heat . . . "Would you like to be in pictures?" they asked the coal miner, who shook his head and said: "Not under such working conditions."

THEATER DEPT.: The characters in Hecht & MacArthur's "The Front Page" were patterned after Chicago newspapermen whose names were used in the play. After the opening the enriched authors were notified that they were to be guests of honor at the Chicago Press Club at a dinner given by the local newspapermen. Hecht and MacArthur tried to duck it, but just had to attend.

They survived the glares and the buns-dunked-in-tomato-soup hurled at them by the $30-a-week reporters who naturally resented the authors who were making a fortune out of portraying them. But when the toastmaster, after presenting the authors with a couple of hot wrist watches, announced: "Don't throw things, boys. We're going to get two life memberships at $1000 each, out of this," the authors fled.

MacArthur rushed into a cab, gave his wrist watch to the cabbie, and said: "Give it to your kid, but don't tell him where it came from."

NEWS DEPT.: The Maharajah of Indore, who could have kept his province independent, decided to join it with Hindustan, on the advice of Winston Churchill . . . Sam Goldwyn, jr., will leave for England next week to become a movie producer. He will be associated with Two Cities Productions . . .

License Commissioner Fielding joined the 8 a. m. line at the Broadway Theater to see the first showing of Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw." He bought a ticket, went inside to see the picture, then went to his office and issued the license for it . . .

Abe Burrows, whose new CBS show has made him a network star, at last is coming into his own. He's entertaining before the National Association of Broadcasters in Atlantic City. Decca is about to release his new album, and Burrows will receive $3500 a week at Cafe Society Uptown.

BOOKS DEPT.: Both the Bricklayers Union and the literary critics are awaiting the new book by Pietro Di Donato, whose "Christ in Concrete" was a prewar best seller. Much has happened to Di Donato in the past few years—including a period in a camp for conscientious objectors, and a happy marriage. "I don't know what to do," the young author said. "I'm too sophisticated to go back to bricklaying, and too confused to write."
